Director's overview

It is with pleasure that I present the first Annual Report of the newly established Director of Child Protection Litigation for the financial year 2016-17.

From 1 July 2016, Queensland became the first jurisdiction in Australia to create a professional separation between the decision to apply for a child protection order and the related frontline child safety casework. The responsibility of deciding whether an application should be made for a child protection order, what type of order should be sought and the conduct of the resulting litigation has been transferred from the chief executive of the Department of Communities, Child Safety and Disability Services (referred to throughout this report as 'Child Safety Services') to the newly established independent statutory officer, the Director of Child Protection Litigation (the Director). The establishment of the Director along with the Office of the Director of Child Protection Litigation (the Director's Office) to support the Director, implemented an innovative recommendation of the Queensland Child Protection Commission of Inquiry in 2013 (the Inquiry).

This report provides information about our performance and records the achievements in ensuring the safety of vulnerable children across Queensland.

I am honoured to have been appointed as Queensland's first Director and to have been entrusted with this crucial role in delivering a critical government service of ensuring the safety of vulnerable children across the State.

Since 2005, I have had a keen interest in child protection and have focussed my career on this complex, challenging and important area. I have worked to improve the professionalism within the practice of child protection law, and my appointment as the first Director has provided me the opportunity to make improvements to the child protection jurisdiction on a case by case and systemic level.

With the establishment of the Director's Office and the implementation of other recommendations of the Inquiry, Queensland's child protection system has seen significant change.

While facing the inevitable challenges of establishing a new agency, the first year of operation has been one of success and substantial achievement:

- on 1 July 2016, the Director became the applicant for 1,407 existing applications that were before the Childrens Court of Queensland (the Childrens Court)
- In the year of 2016-17, the Director received and dealt with 2414 referred child protection matters, filing 2373 applications for child protection orders and referring 41 matters back to Child Safety Services
- conducting the resulting child protection proceedings in the Court at 66 locations across Queensland
- providing continuing professional development (CPD) and training to staff employed in the Director's Office, and
- liaising with key stakeholders.

At the outset, I would like to acknowledge the tireless efforts of the Child Safety Services staff who deliver frontline child protection services and who provide the expert evidence that is utilised by the Director's Office in child protection applications. While the implementation of the Director's Office has no doubt impacted on the workflow of these frontline staff, they regularly demonstrate their commitment to assisting the Director's Office to achieve its purpose of applying for child protection orders and conducting child protection proceedings. I would also like to acknowledge the work of officers employed in Child Safety Services' Office of the Child and Family Official Solicitor (OCFOS), who have assisted the Director throughout the year in the implementation of this new child protection litigation model.

I wish to express my gratitude for the efforts of the transition and implementation teams, and the support provided by Crown Law and Department of Justice and Attorney-General during our first year.

I acknowledge and thank the other key stakeholders in the child protection system who have assisted in the implementation of the Director by providing support, guidance, feedback and understanding during our first year of operation, including the members of the Judiciary, separate representatives, child protection practitioners, Legal Aid Queensland (LAQ), Office of the Public Guardian (OPG) and recognised entities.

The achievements of the Director and the Director's Office would not be possible without our most valuable resource, our staff. I acknowledge and thank each and every member of staff within the Director's Office for their perseverance, determination and commitment in the pursuit of the Director's functions and in contributing to our achievements. I am proud to lead Queensland's most experienced child protection legal practice. Our almost exclusively Brisbane-based lawyers travel to the Childrens Court sitting at locations throughout Queensland, many on a weekly or fortnightly basis. While the centralised model is important to streamlining quality service-delivery throughout the state, I recognise the challenges this creates for our lawyers and dedicated litigation support staff. It is an honour to work with such a skilled, knowledgeable and professional team, and I am proud of what we have collectively achieved in our first year.

While I am not subject to ministerial direction in relation to the performance of my statutory functions, I extend my thanks to the Attorney-General and the Director-General of the Department of Justice and Attorney-General (DJAG) for their time and support in my first year as Director, and for the respect shown to the independence of my position.

It is a privilege to be a part of this innovative approach to child protection litigation and I look forward to continuing to work with my extraordinary executive management team and staff to improve outcomes for children and their families by providing greater accountability and oversight for child protection order applications proposed by Child Safety Services, by ensuring that the applications filed in court are supported by good quality evidence, promoting efficiency and evidence-based decision making.

About Us

Establishment of the Director

The Director was established on 1 July 2016 as an independent statutory officer, within the DJAG portfolio, reporting directly to the Attorney-General and Minister for Justice. The Director's Office was also established on 1 July 2016 to help the Director perform the Director's functions.

The establishment of the Director implemented recommendation 13.17 of the Inquiry's final report 'Taking Responsibility: A Roadmap for Queensland Child Protection'. Recommendation 13.17 was that:

The Queensland Government establish an independent statutory agency — the Director of Child Protection — within the Justice portfolio to make decisions as to which matters will be the subject of a child protection application and what type of child protection order will be sought, as well as litigate the applications.

Staff from the Director of Child Protection will bring applications for child protection orders before the Childrens Court and higher courts, except in respect of certain interim or emergent orders where it is not practicable to do so. In the latter case, some officers within the Department of Communities, Child Safety and Disability Services will retain authority to make applications.

In December 2013, the Queensland Government responded to the Inquiry's final report, which included an acceptance of recommendation 13.17.

The Director of Child Protection Litigation Bill 2016 was introduced to Parliament on 16 February 2016. The explanatory notes to the Bill provide that the policy objectives of the Bill establishing the Director were:

- to improve outcomes for children and families, and
- provide greater accountability and oversight for child protection order applications that are proposed by Child Safety Services, by ensuring that applications filed in court are supported by good quality evidence, promoting efficiency and evidence-based decision making.

The Director of Child Protection Litigation Act 2016 (Qld) (the DCPL Act) was assented to on 25 May 2016 and commenced on 1 July 2016.

The Director's functions and powers

The main purpose of the DCPL Act is to establish the Director to apply for child protection orders and conduct child protection proceedings.

In respect of the establishment of the Director, the DCPL Act provides the following in respect of the Director's functions and powers:

- to independently decide whether or not an application for a child protection order should be made for a child, and the type of order that should be sought. If an application for a child protection order is made, the Director is responsible for conducting the legal proceeding in the Court, including any appeals from decisions about child protection orders
- to prepare and apply for transfers of child protection orders and proceedings to participating states, and
- to provide legal advice to, or appear for Child Safety Services on its instructions for the following matters:
 - adoption
 - family law
 - Queensland Civil and Administrative Tribunal (QCAT) reviews
 - Hague Child Abduction Convention, or
 - Other matters relating to the safety, wellbeing or protection of a child.

Under the DCPL Act, the Director is referred matters by Child Safety Services and is responsible for deciding which matters will be the subject of an application for a child protection order and what type of child protection order will be sought, as well as litigating the applications.

Principles for the administration of the DCPL Act

The main principle for the administration of the DCPL Act is that the safety, wellbeing and best interests of a child are paramount.

Other principles for the administration of the DCPL Act are as follows:

- collaboration between the Director and Child Safety Services best achieves fair, timely and consistent outcomes for the protection of children
- in protecting a child, the Director should only take the action that is warranted in the circumstances, including, for example, by applying for the least intrusive child protection order
- the Director should consider whether sufficient, relevant and appropriate evidence is available in deciding whether to make an application for a child protection order
- each principle stated in the Child Protection Act 1999 (CP Act), section 5B for ensuring safety, wellbeing and best interests of a child, to the extent the principle is capable of being applied to a person performing a function or exercising a power under the DCPL Act, including for example –
 - a child has a right to be protected from harm or risk of harm; and
 - a delay in making a decision in relation to a child should be avoided, unless appropriate for the child, and
- each additional principle applying in relation to an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child stated in the CP Act, section 5C.

Also, each principle relevant to exercising powers and making decisions under the CP Act, section 5D(1) applies to the extent the principle is capable of being applied to a person exercising a power or making a decision under the DCPL Act and the principles relating to obtaining a child's view set out in the CP Act, section 5E applies in relation to giving a child an opportunity to express their views appropriately.

Other major child protection litigation reforms

In addition to the establishment of the Director, the other major child protection litigation reforms that commenced on 1 July 2016 were the revised Childrens Court Rules (the Rules) and the introduction of a duty of disclosure.

The Director is subject to a duty to disclose, to each other party in a child protection proceeding, all documents in the Director's possession or control that are relevant to the proceeding. This duty continues until the proceeding is decided. The duty of disclosure is subject to the provisions of the CP Act, with section 191 providing that the Director may refuse to disclose particular documents on certain grounds. Where the Director refuses disclosure, a party to the proceeding may make an application to the Court, and the Court may order the disclosure on the conditions it considers appropriate. Disclosure occurs between the Director and parties to a proceeding and will not involve the court, apart from its consideration of applications made under the CP Act or the making of directions with respect to disclosure under the Rules.

Director's Guidelines

Under the DCPL Act, section 39, the Director issued written guidelines on 2 August 2016 and a copy of these are in Appendix 4. The Guidelines were issued to:

- all staff employed in the Director's Office
- Child Safety Services and all staff working in the following areas undertaking work relevant to the functions of the Director:

- OCFOS
 - Child Safety Service Centres, and
 - Child Safety's Legal Services;
- lawyers engaged by the Director to carry out the Director's functions under the DCPL Act.

Structure of the Director's Office

The Office of the Director is based in Brisbane, with one (1) lawyer in Atherton.

The Queensland Government determined that the Director's Office would be established as a Brisbane based model. The Brisbane based model has been essential to ensure appropriate professional supervision, ongoing training and support for staff and to promote consistency of approach.

This has also been important to establish and embed a new culture, particularly in the early stages and drive practice improvement consistent with the intent of the court reforms. The Brisbane based model has also allowed the Director's Office to share support services with Crown Law, such as information technology and records management.

The Director's Office operates three chamber groups of lawyers, with each Chambers allocated specific regions across the State to ensure the Director's Office is responsive to local service delivery needs, and resulting in a consistent group of lawyers appearing in the Court in a particular region and working with the local Child Safety Service Centre staff, OCFOS officers, partner agencies and local lawyers.

Each referred child protection matter that is received from Child Safety Services is allocated to an experienced lawyer, referred to as an Applicant Lawyer, to be dealt with under the DCPL Act. If the Applicant Lawyer decides an application for a child protection order should be made, they draft the application and settle the initial supporting affidavits. Once the application is filed, a dedicated File Lawyer then takes responsibility for managing the resulting child protection proceedings in the Court at the particular location that the application has been filed. This ensures consistency in file management, with File Lawyers managing the proceeding from the point it is filed until the application has been determined. The Applicant Lawyer that dealt with the referred matter will be briefed to appear at any complex interim hearing, court ordered conference and final hearing.

Personal appearances at mentions, court ordered conferences and hearings have been the preferred mode of attendance for lawyers appearing on behalf of the Director. However, in the event that a personal appearance was not required, lawyers have used audio visual and telephone options to appear, for example where at the mention of a proceeding, procedural issues have been dealt with and the proceeding has been adjourned on an uncontested basis.

In 2016-17, no private lawyers were engaged by the Director under the DCPL Act, section 11 to carry out the Director's functions.

Lawyers employed in the Director's office have appeared in the Childrens Court sitting at 66 locations throughout the State, collaboratively working with officers employed within OCFOS and Child Safety Services staff employed in 51 Child Safety Service Centres throughout the State.

Improvement to child protection service delivery by the Director

The establishment of the Director along with the Director's Office has contributed to the improvement of outcomes for children and families by:

- ensuring there is greater accountability and oversight for child protection order applications that have been proposed by Child Safety Services, which provides an assurance that State intervention is proportionate and occurs only where necessary

- for the first time, specialised lawyers with child protection expertise are involved at the earliest stage of State intervention by way of a child protection order, determining whether or not an application for a child protection order should be made for a child, and if so, the type of order that should be sought
- when an application for a child protection order is made, the Director is drafting the application and ensuring that it is supported by good quality evidence, promoting efficiency and evidence-based decision making
- the resulting litigation is now conducted for the first time by specialised lawyers, appearing at each court event throughout the proceeding in accordance with the model litigant principles, and affording procedural fairness and natural justice to the children and families involved, with the litigation only progressing when the evidence supports the application, and
- achieving child protection orders made by the court that meet a child's protection and care needs in a fair, timely and consistent manner.

Enabling Legislation & responsible Minister

The Director was established under the DCPL Act, which commenced on 1 July 2016.

The DCPL Act is administered by the Attorney-General of Queensland.

The DCPL Act was passed by the Legislative Assembly on 11 May 2016 in cognate with the Child Protection Reform Amendment Bill 2016.

Consultation and contributions toward legislation

The Director was consulted as a stakeholder on the Courts and Civil Legislation Amendment Bill 2017.

Learning and development

The Director's Office has a strong commitment to ensuring its lawyers are equipped with the knowledge and skills required to perform the statutory functions of the Director to a high standard and to the ongoing professional development of staff employed in the Director's Office. This is reflected in the induction training provided to staff in the lead up to and following the commencement of formal operations of the Director's Office on 1 July 2016, and its continuing professional development (CPD) program.

The Director's Office also has a strong commitment to building the cultural capability of its staff, particularly with respect to decision making and the conduct of child protection proceedings for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families.

Induction training

In preparation for the commencement of the Director's Office, an induction training program was developed that was delivered across various days during the month of June 2016. This included sessions that focussed on:

- the child protection reforms resulting from the Inquiry and the drivers for change
- the DCPL Act and the role of the Director
- child protection proceedings and the CP Act
- good administrative decision making
- drafting of child protection applications
- the Director's duty of disclosure
- advocacy skills
- the interface between domestic and family violence proceedings and child protection proceedings, and
- vicarious trauma.

Building on the June 2016 induction program, further training was provided across 3 days in November 2016 to staff that joined the Director's Office after 1 July 2016. This included similar topics to those covered in the June 2016 training.

CPD program

The Director's Office has established an internal CPD program, which forms part of a wider supervision and practice management framework. The CPD program reflects the Director's Office ongoing commitment to building the proficiency of its lawyers across all aspects of their role and responsibilities. Through the CPD program, lawyers are encouraged to maintain a high standard of practice through a commitment to continued learning in their discipline.

The CPD program requires lawyers to continually develop their skills and competence through attendance at a range of learning and development sessions, which are 1 to 1½ hours in length, and are generally delivered on a fortnightly basis on a Friday afternoon in order to avoid scheduled child protection call overs in the Childrens Court across the State.

The program has included CPD sessions presented by a variety of presenters, both in-house and from external agencies, with a focus on skills and/or knowledge relevant to the work of the Director. In developing the CPD program, input was sought from staff employed in the Director's Office about suggested topic areas and has involved lawyers employed in the Director's Office with a particular interest and expertise in a relevant area presenting CPD sessions for their colleagues.

Early sessions focussed on ensuring the Director's staff had a good grounding in the work of Child Safety Services, in particular in their key work of conducting investigations and assessments and providing support to children and families with a particular focus on Child Safety Services' Framework for Practice. This training was an important foundation for the development of a strong collaborative relationship between the Director's staff and Child Safety Services staff.

CPD sessions are recorded and are made available for staff who are unable to attend the live session to watch at a later date via the Director's Office Learning and Development site. Training resources, including PowerPoint presentations and research articles, for each session are also made available to all staff through the site.

The CPD program requires lawyers employed in the Director's Office to complete at least 10 CPD units per year (1 point is 1 hour), which mirrors the rules of the QLS and the Bar Association of Queensland relating to CPD.

Session topics in the 2016-17 program included Child Safety Services' Framework for Practice, court ordered conferencing, participation of children in child protection proceedings, principles of best evidence, childhood trauma and pathology reports. A full list of CPD sessions can be found in Appendix 2.

Cultural awareness training

In addition to the above training, the Director's Office engaged Grant Sarra Consultancy to work alongside the Director's management team to strengthen the cultural capability of the Director's staff in terms of decision making and the conduct of child protection proceedings for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families. This is a critically important learning and development priority given the disproportionate representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children in all stages of the child protection system. The Director's engagement with Grant Sarra has so far included the delivery of a full day's cultural awareness training to all staff employed in the Director's Office, both lawyers, including our regionally-based lawyer, and litigation support staff in June 2017, and a subsequent meeting to discuss the next steps, including the development of a cultural capability framework for the Director's Office.

Stakeholder engagement

The effective performance of the Director's statutory functions requires the development of strong and constructive working relationships with Child Safety Services, including OCFOS officers and Child Safety Service Centre staff, along with other key partner agencies. This is central to achieving the collaboration as envisaged in the DCPL Act, and to the promotion of fair, timely and consistent outcomes for the protection of children that are the subject of referred child protection matters dealt with by the Director.

From the inception of the Director's Office, stakeholder engagement has been a key focus, with staff being encouraged to engage with local stakeholders across Queensland, including Child Safety Services staff, court staff, Magistrates, recognised entities, legal representatives and other relevant agencies. The purpose of this engagement is to build relationships, promote an awareness and understanding of the Director's role and responsibilities, and develop a culture of continuous improvement in service delivery. Staff employed in the Director's Office understand that, not only is this work linked to their file work, but it is central to the success of the Director's functions and the effective implementation of the new child protection litigation model.

Building bridges and developing partnerships

In recognition of the importance of stakeholder engagement to the successful implementation of the new child protection litigation model, the Director and staff have invested significant effort, including the participation in numerous activities to build bridges and develop strong relationships with our key partners. This activity can be divided into the following four broad categories:

- Meeting with OCFOS officers and Child Safety Service Centre staff;
- Meeting with Magistrates, recognised entities, legal representatives and other relevant agencies;
- Participation in regular strategic meetings with child protection legal stakeholders and participation in local Childrens Court legal stakeholder meetings; and
- Presenting at relevant training events, symposiums and workshops.

In the first year of operation, staff employed in the Director's Office have regularly visited Child Safety Service Centres in various locations across Queensland to progress their day to day file work. In addition, in partnership with OCFOS officers, the Director's staff have visited in excess of 20 Child Safety Service Centres across Queensland for targeted meetings on the implementation of the child protection reforms. This has included locations in Brisbane, Ipswich, Toowoomba, Gladstone, Townsville and Cairns. The purpose of these meetings is to share perspectives and learnings about how we are working together, share good practice and identify priority areas for continuous improvement. These meetings will continue to be progressed during the second year of operation of the Director's Office. As well as visiting Child Safety Service Centres, the Director along with staff have participated in a number of joint workshops and training events with the Official Solicitor and OCFOS officers, with the aim of strengthening and promoting collaboration between our offices.

In addition to engaging with Child Safety Services, the Director along with the Director's staff, have engaged with Magistrates throughout the state and also registry staff at locations where child protection order applications have been filed and heard. The purpose of these meetings is to promote an awareness of the functions of the Director, receive feedback about the operation of court proceedings under the new model and identify areas for development and improvement.

In terms of the strategic oversight of the implementation of the new child protection litigation model, the Director and Assistant Directors have engaged in regular monthly meetings with Child Safety Services' OCFOS leadership team, and the Director attended a meeting of Child Safety Services Regional Directors, and Assistant Directors have attended meetings of Child Safety Service's Senior Area Leadership Teams in the Central and South West Child Safety Services regions.

Further, a legal stakeholders meeting was established in Brisbane in May 2017 with membership including the Director, OCFOS, LAQ, the OPG, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Service, Queensland Indigenous Family Violence Legal Service and the QLS. Lawyers employed in the Director's Office have also participated in local Childrens Court legal stakeholder meetings.

Finally, the Director and Assistant Directors have been active in presenting at numerous training events, symposiums and workshops including events held by our legal partner agencies, non-government partners and legal practitioner networks across Queensland.

During the Director's Office second year of operation, building strong relationships with our partner agencies will remain a strategic priority and a significant focus of our work.

Performance

Transitioned applications

On 1 July 2016, the Director under the DCPL Act became the applicant for all existing applications for a child protection orders that were before the Childrens Court, which was 1,405 applications (individual children). The Director also became a respondent to 2 applications to revoke a child protection order and make another child protection order, and a respondent to 18 appeals that transitioned.

Received referred child protection matters

On 1 July 2016, the Director began receiving referred child protection matters from Child Safety Services. Under the DCPL Act, Child Safety Services must refer a matter to the Director when:

- satisfied a child is a child in need of protection and that a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; or
- if a child protection order is in force for a child, and is satisfied that the order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.

A matter relates to an individual child and for each matter that must be referred to the Director, under the DCPL Act and the Director's Guidelines, Child Safety Services is required to provide a completed 'Form A – Referral of Child Protection Matter Summary Form' (Form A) and a brief of evidence that includes:

- the reasons why the child is a child in need of protection and the reasons why an order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection along with the type of order Child Safety Services considers is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, or
- the reasons why a child protection order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.

Child Safety Services must also provide available supporting documents and all other available documents and evidence that are relevant to the referred matter.

In the year 2016-17, the Director received 2494 completed Form A's for individual children. In respect of the received Form A's, the types and totals of existing Child Safety Services intervention in relation to the children at the time the matters were referred to the Director are set in the following table:

Table 1
Type of intervention	Number of referred child protection matters	Percentage of total referred child protection matters
No order or no agreement	226	9.1%
Assessment Care Agreement (ACA)	98	3.9%
Temporary Assessment Order (TAO)	19	0.8%
Court Assessment Order (CAO)	549	22%
Child Protection Care Agreement (CPCA)	131	5.2%
Temporary Custody Order (TCO)	449	18%

Table 1
Type of intervention	Number of referred child protection matters	Percentage of total referred child protection matters
Child Protection Order (CPO)	974	39.1%
Multiple interventions	48	1.9%
Total	2494	100%

The reference to multiple interventions in the above table relates to matters that were referred to the Director as family groups that concerned more than one child each of whom was the subject of a different type of existing intervention at the time the completed Form A's were received.

At Appendix 3, the type of existing Child Safety Services intervention are set out in relation each of the 2494 referred matters at the time the Director received a Form A relating to them by reference to Child Safety Services seven regions.

Timeliness of specific referred matters

Under the Director's Guidelines issued on 2 August 2016, where Child Safety Services must refer a matter to the Director that concerns a child that is subject to a CPO, the matter should be referred as soon as practicable and where possible, not less than two months before the CPO ends. Also, where Child Safety Services must refer a matter to the Director that concerns a child that is subject to an emergency order, defined to include children the subject of either a TAO, CAO or TCO, the matter should be referred as soon as practicable and where possible, no later than 24 hours before the emergency order ends.

The following table sets out the timeliness of received referred matters for children subject to an emergency order at time the Director received a Form A relating to them:

Time	TAO	Percentage of total matters	CAO	Percentage of total matters	TCO	Percentage of total matters
Number of referred matters less than 24 hours	5	26.3%	20	3.6%	95	21.2%
Number of matters referred with more than 24 hours	14	73.7%	529	96.4%	354	78.8%
Total	19	100%	549	100%	449	100%

The total number of referred matters concerning children the subject of an emergency order was 1,017, with 897 of these (88.2%) meeting the timeframe as provided in the Director's Guidelines.

The following table sets out the timeliness of received referred matters for children subject to a CPO at time the Director received a Form A relating to them:

Table 3
Time of when matter received by Director	Number of matters	Percentage of total matters
Same day as existing CPO ended	19	2%
Day before as existing CPO ended	82	8.4%

Time of when matter received by Director	Number of matters	Percentage of total matters
One clear business day before existing CPO ended	97	10%
Between 2 and 3 clear business days before existing CPO ended	190	19.4%
Between 4 and 8 clear business days (within the 2 nd week) before existing CPO ended	273	28%
Between 9 and 18 clear business days (within the 3 rd and 4 th weeks) before existing CPO ended	150	15.4%
Between 19 and 39 clear business days (within 1 - 2 months) before existing CPO ended	76	7.8%
More than 39 clear business days (2 months or more)	19	2%
Not applicable	68	7%
Total	974	100%

A matter is defined as not applicable where Child Safety Services have referred a matter and prior to referring the matter, have assessed that an application needs to be made to extend an existing CPO or to either vary or revoke an existing CPO, or revoke an existing CPO and make another CPO in its place pursuant to the CP Act, sections 64 and 65.

Whilst a significant number of referred matters (88.2%) in the first year of operation that concerned children the subject of an emergency order met the timeframe as provided in the Director's Guidelines, only 2% of matters that concerned children the subject of existing CPOs met the timeframe.

Noting children the subject of an existing CPO at the time a matter was referred comprised 39.1% of the total number of matters received by the Director's Office, managing these matters within a compressed timeframe has been challenging and has impacted on resourcing. However, the Director when dealing with matters, as set out below, has worked collaboratively with Child Safety Services to ensure that the matters have been dealt with in a manner that has ensured the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the children.

Accepted child protection matters

In respect of the 2494 received Form A's, as at close of business on 30 June 2017, the Director had accepted 2456 referred matters under the DCPL Act. Of the remaining Form A's that were received, 24 related to matters that Child Safety Services had not provided a brief of evidence to the Director before the end of the 2016-17 year, and a further 14 related to matters that were determined by the Director to not comply with the requirements of the DCPL Act in respect of the referral of a matter to the Director. An example of non-compliance has occurred where the Director has received a Form A related to a child and subsequently Child Safety Services has not provided an accompanying brief of evidence as their assessment of the child's protective needs has changed. These matters have been included on the basis that staff employed in the Director's Office performed work in the year when considering each of these matters in the context of the requirements of the DCPL Act.

In respect of referred matters, the following table sets out the age of children the subject of a referred matter as a percentage:

1 year of age	3.40%

In respect of referred matters, the following table sets out the percentage of children referred to the Director who were identified as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander:

Child protection matters dealt with by the Director

Under the DCPL Act, in respect of each accepted referred matter, the Director must deal with it by deciding to either:

- apply for a child protection order for the child; or
- refer the matter back to Child Safety Services.

It is noted that of the 2456 matters referred in the year, the Director dealt with 2414 of the matters within the year and the remaining 42 accepted matters had not been dealt with by the Director as at close of business on 30 June 2017.

Of the 2414 matters, the Director when dealing with 1946 matters (80.6% of the total matters), consulted generally with Child Safety Services in the course of dealing with the matters.

Before deciding how to deal with a matter, the Director may ask Child Safety Services to provide further evidence or information about the matter. Of the 2414 matters that were referred to and dealt with by the Director in 2016-17, the Director asked for further evidence or information about 1262 matters (52.3% of the total matters) before deciding how to deal with them.

In deciding whether to apply for a child protection order, the Director may apply for an order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different, from the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection.

It is noted that before the Director decides to either refer a matter back to Child Safety Services or to apply for an order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different from, the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection, the Director must consult with Child Safety Services to try and reach an agreement in respect of how the matter should be dealt with. If after this consultation an agreement is not reached, the Director must provide Child Safety Services with written reasons for the Director's decision. Child Safety Services may then request that the Director conduct an internal review of the decision under the Director's Guidelines. An internal review is then conducted by a different lawyer of the same or higher level employed in the Director's Office. The review is conducted on the same information that was considered in reaching the initial decision. If Child Safety Services have new information that they would like the Director to consider, Child Safety Services will refer a new matter to the Director.

In addition to general consultation regarding a referred matter, the Director consulted with Child Safety Services in respect of 512 matters (21.2% of total matters) in circumstances when the Director was considering either referring a matter back to Child Safety Services or applying for an order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different, from the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection.

The Director dealt with the 2414 referred matters in the year as follows:

- 41 matters (1.70% of the total matters) were referred back to Child Safety Services with their agreement
- 1991 matters (82.48% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director by applying for the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection
- 363 matters (15.04% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director by applying for an order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different, from the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection with the agreement of Child Safety Services. These 363 matters can be divided into the following:
 - 203 matters (8.41% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director applying for orders of a different type to the orders Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for the children's protection
 - 127 matters (5.26% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director applying for orders of a different duration from the orders Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for the children's protection, and
 - 33 matters (1.37% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director applying for orders that were otherwise different from the orders Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for the children's protection.
- 19 matters (0.79% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director by applying for an order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different, from the order that Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for a child's protection without the agreement of Child Safety Services. These 19 matters can be divided into the following:
 - 14 matters (0.58% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director applying for orders of a different type to the orders Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, and
 - 5 matters (0.21% of the total matters) were dealt with by the Director applying for orders of a different duration from the orders Child Safety Services considered appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.

In 2016-17, Child Safety Services did not request that the Director undertake an internal review of a decision made by the Director in dealing with a referred matter.

It is also noted that in 2016-17, the Director was a respondent to 26 applications made by children's parents to either vary or revoke child protection orders for children.

Applications for child protection orders made by the Director

In 2016-17, of the 2373 matters the Director dealt with by applying for a child protection order, the following table sets out types of child protection orders sought by reference to the orders set out in the CP Act, section 61, noting that where the application filed by the Director sought more than one type of order, the order that appears last by reference to section 61 is reflected in the table:

Table 6

Long-term guardianship to Child Safety Services – an order granting long-term guardianship of a child to Child Safety Services	590	24.86%
Revoke a child protection order – an order revoking an existing child protection order for a child	14	0.59%

Applications for child protections orders determined by the Court

In 2016-17, the Director finally dealt with 2036 applications for child protection orders in the Childrens Court, which consisted of the following:

- of the 1,407 existing applications and proceedings that transitioned to be the responsibility of the Director on 1 July 2016, 1,079 were dealt with by either the making of a child protection order or the withdrawal of the application with the court's leave
- of the 2376 applications that the Director made, 942 were dealt with by either the making of a child protection order or the withdrawal of the application with the court's leave, and
- of the applications in which the Director was a respondent, 15 were dealt with by either the making of a child protection order or the withdrawal of the application with the court's leave.

Appeals

The Director initiated 21 appeals during the first year of operation in respect of individual children. These were comprised of:

- 14 appeals against a decision of the Childrens Court on the adjournment of a child protection order application, and
- 7 appeals against a decision of the Childrens Court on the final determination of a child protection order application.

Of the 14 appeals against a decision of the Childrens Court on the adjournment of a proceeding, the majority related to a decision not to make an interim order granting temporary custody of the child to Child Safety Services. In some cases, the Director sought and was granted a stay of the decision appealed against. All but 3 of these appeals were decided within the year, and in each case the appeal was allowed.

Of the 7 appeals initiated against a decision of the Childrens Court on the final determination of a child protection order application, 1 was withdrawn and none were decided within the year.

In addition to appeals initiated by the Director, the Director was also the respondent in a number of appeals initiated by parents during the first year of operation.

SDS measures

The Director is currently developing effectiveness and efficiency measures and will ensure any new measures align with the Performance Management Framework definitions, and represent how it supports the Government's objectives and its responsibilities under the DCPL Act.

Child Death and Serious Physical Injury Reporting

The Director's Office Child Death and Serious Physical Injury Case Review Policy implements Chapter 7A 'child deaths and other matters' of the CP Act.

Under this Chapter, the Director must carry out a review of the involvement of the Director's Office in a matter relating to a child if:

- the child dies or suffers serious physical injury; and
- Child Safety Services gives notice to the Director; and
- at the time of the child's death or serious physical injury, the Director is involved in performing a litigation function; or
- within 1 year before the child's death or serious physical injury, the Director has performed a litigation function in relation to the child; or
- Child Safety Services requests a review in writing.

The purposes of requiring child death and serious physical injury case reviews are:

- to facilitate the ongoing learning and improvement in the provision of services by the Director; and
- to promote the accountability of the Director.

During the period of the 2016-17 annual report, the Director was given notice of 3 matters that required the Director to carry out a review.

The Director is responsible for determining the extent of the review and whether it will be carried out internally, engage an external consultant to conduct and finalise the review or a specialist for advice.

Where the review concerns an Aboriginal child or Torres Strait Islander child, the Director may engage a cultural consultant to provide advice regarding culturally appropriate practice throughout the review process.

Under section 40(2)(b) of the DCPL Act, any actions taken during the financial year in response to a report given by a review panel under section 246DD of the CP Act must be included in the annual report.

The Director completed 1 review relating to a child's death and 1 review relating to a serious physical injury and submitted the resulting reports to the Child Death Case Review Panel and, where necessary, the Office of the State Coroner.

The Director did not receive any reports by a Review Panel in the year.

Chapter 1 - Introduction

Part 1 Role of the Director of Child Protection Litigation

1. The Director of Child Protection Litigation (DCPL) is established by the Director of Child Protection Litigation Act 2016 (the Act). The DCPL is an independent statutory authority located within the justice portfolio representing the State. The main functions of the DCPL are to:
 - a. prepare and apply for child protection orders (including applications to extend, vary or revoke a child protection orders) and conduct child protection proceedings in the Childrens Court of Queensland;
 - b. prepare and apply for transfers of child protection orders or proceedings between Queensland and other participating States; and

- c. prepare, institute and conduct appeals against decisions of the Childrens Court of Queensland on applications for child protection orders, and decisions to transfer a child protection order or children protection proceeding to a participating State.
2. The DCPL also has the following functions on request:
 - a. to provide legal advice to Child Safety in relation to the functions of Child Safety under the Adoption Act 2009 and the Child Protection Act 1999 (CP Act) and other matters relating to the safety, wellbeing or protection of a child;
 - b. to represent the State in legal proceedings under the Adoption Act 2009 and the Child Protection Act 1999; and
 - c. to provide advice to the State about a matter to which that Convention of the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction applications under the Family Law Act 1975 (Cwlth), section 111B, and to represent the State in proceedings relating to the matter.

Part 2 Role of the Office of the Child and Family Official Solicitor

3. The Office of the Child and Family Official Solicitor (OCFOS) is a legal unit within Child Safety and is the principal point of contact for the DCPL. Key responsibilities of OCFOS include:
 - a. providing legal services and advice to Child Safety Service Centres (CSSC) about Child Safety's statutory functions relating to the protection of children;
 - b. applying for temporary assessment orders, court assessment orders and temporary custody orders (emergency orders);
 - c. working with CSSCs to prepare briefs of evidence for child protection matters that are being referred to the DCPL;
 - d. working in partnership with the DCPL to prepare matters for filing in the Childrens Court and providing ongoing consultation in the review and management of those matters; and
 - e. Liaising with CSSCs and the DCPL as necessary to progress child protection matters in a timely manner consistent with the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the children.

Part 3 Principles of the Director of Child Protection Litigation Act 2016

4. The principles for administering the Act are contained in sections 5 and 6. A decision by the DCPL to apply for a child protection order or to refer a matter back to Child Safety may have profound implications for a child and their family. The principles apply to all actions taken and decisions made by the DCPL in the exercise of its statutory functions.

Part 4 Model litigant principles

5. As well as applying the principles of the Act, the DCPL, as a representative of the State, has a duty to exercise its statutory functions in accordance with model litigant principles.
6. Model litigant principles reflect the court's and the community's expectation that the State will conduct litigation in a way that is firm and fair. Model litigant principles state that fairness will be achieved when litigation is conducted promptly, efficiently, consistently and proportionately and in a manner that does not take advantage of another party's limited financial or other means. The model litigant principles are published on the Department of Justice and Attorney General's website and are available here: www.justice.qld.gov.au/justice-services/legal-services-coordination-unit/legal-service-directions-and-guidelines/model-litigant-principles

7. Child protection proceedings are unique and should not be conducted in a manner that is overly adversarial. Similarly, court outcomes should not be thought of in terms of 'winning' or 'losing' the case. Instead, the DCPL's overarching obligation is to assist the court to make a fully informed decision in accordance with the provisions of the CP Act and the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child.
8. Whilst not an exhaustive list, in complying with its obligation to act as a model litigant the DCPL should:
 - a. ensure applications give fair and proper notice of the DCPL's case to parents, children (where appropriate) and other participants in proceedings;
 - b. ensure sufficient, relevant and appropriate evidence is filed in support of applications, including evidence that does not support the applications;
 - c. ensure all relevant information is disclosed to other parties;
 - d. progress application as quickly as possible avoiding any unnecessary delay;
 - e. explore opportunities for early resolution of applications;
 - f. conduct child protection proceedings in a way that assists the court to make a fully informed decision about the safety, wellbeing and best interests children;
 - g. conduct child protection proceedings in a way that is fair to other parties paying particular care not to take advantage of parties who are unrepresented; and
 - h. institute appeals that are consistent with the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the children and have a reasonable prospect of success.
9. Child Safety should assist the DCPL to comply with its model litigant obligations by:
 - a. providing the DCPL with all relevant information commencing with the referral of a child protection matter until the matter is finalised either by the Childrens Court of Queensland or by a referral back to Child Safety;
 - b. preparing affidavits that are balanced and fair including information that does not support the application, as well as information that supports the application;
 - c. taking reasonable steps to obtain further evidence or information requested by the DCPL;
 - d. ensuring the DCPL has up to date information about the child prior to court events; and
 - e. ensuring an officer with relevant case knowledge and authority attends all court events or is otherwise available by telephone.

Part 5 Collaboration between the DCPL and Child Safety

10. The DCPL and Child Safety can promote good outcomes for children by working together collaboratively. Strong collaboration between the DCPL and Child Safety is fundamental to the exercise of the DCPL's statutory functions in a way that promotes the safety, wellbeing and best interests of children.¹

11. A strong and effective partnership between the DCPL and Child Safety is promoted by a mutual understanding and respect for each other's role in protecting Queensland's children who have been harmed or are at risk of being harmed from abuse and neglect. Child Safety has expertise and powers for the investigation and assessment of reported child abuse and neglect and statutory responsibility for providing and coordinating support services for the protection of children. The DCPL has expertise in preparing and applying for child protection orders, and conducting child protection proceedings. There is a clear separation between the Child Safety's investigation, assessment and casework responsibilities, and the DCPL's litigation responsibilities. Both agencies have a critical role to play in protecting and promoting the safety, wellbeing and best interests of children in Queensland.
12. In addition to the importance of collaboration between the DCPL and Child Safety generally, the relationship between the DCPL and OCFOS is particularly important. OCFOS has expertise in the assessment of the sufficiency of evidence to support an application for a child protection order and in the preparation of the brief of evidence accompanying a referral to the DCPL. The DCPL should work in partnership with OCFOS to finalise court material in preparation for filing in court and in the ongoing review and conduct of proceedings.
13. Strong collaboration between the DCPL and Child Safety will also be facilitated by the free flow of relevant information between both agencies so that decision making is underpinned by a comprehensive understanding of all of the circumstances of the case.

Part 6 Timeliness

14. The DCPL and Child Safety should work together in a manner that is quick and efficient. Timeliness and avoiding unnecessary delay in decision making and the progress of child protection proceedings promotes the safety, wellbeing and best interests of children who are referred to the DCPL.

Chapter 2 – Referring a child protection matter to the DCPL

Part 1 Terminology

15. In this Chapter references to an application for a child protection order should be taken as also referring to an application to extend a child protection order and, where applicable, to an application to vary or revoke a child protection order. Chapter 8 of these Guidelines provides further guidance about an application to vary or revoke a child protection order.

16. Only Child Safety, through OCFOS, can refer a child protection matter to the DCPL. If an agency or a person other than Child Safety attempts to refer a child protection matter to the DCPL, they should be advised to contact Child Safety who is responsible for conducting investigations and assessments, and providing and coordinating support services to children and families where a child is assessed to be a child in need of protection.

Part 3 When Child Safety must refer a child protection matter

17. Child Safety must refer a child protection matter to the DCPL when satisfied:
- a. a child is a child in need of protection; and
 - b. a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; or
 - c. for a child that is subject to a child protection order (other than an interim order under section 67 of the CP Act)—that the order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.²

Part 4 How a child protection matter can be referred

18. The preferred way for OCFOS to refer a child protection matter to the DCPL is electronically via SharePoint.
19. Where the referral cannot be made via SharePoint for any reason, a child protection matter should be provided to the DCPL using the secure file transfer protocol. Otherwise, the referral can be hand delivered, faxed or posted to the DCPL.

Part 5 Telling the child's family about the referral

20. Where Child Safety refer a child protection matter to the DCPL, they should tell the child's parents about the referral, explain why they have made the referral and what this means. Child Safety should also tell the child about the referral where Child Safety consider that is appropriate having regard to the child's age or ability to understand.

Part 6 Acknowledgment of receipt

21. The DCPL will provide a written acknowledgement of receipt of every referral, irrespective of how it was received. The written acknowledgement of receipt should be provided via SharePoint within 24 hours of receiving the referral. If Child Safety do not receive this, they should contact the DCPL to confirm the referral has been received.

Part 7 A Referral of Child Protection Matter Summary

22. When Child Safety refer a child protection matter to the DCPL, a completed 'Form A – Referral of Child Protection Matter/s Summary form' should clearly and succinctly address the matters set out in section 16(1)(a) or (b) of the Act as appropriate stating the material facts underpinning the assessment and that are evidenced in the supporting documents. The 'Form A – Referral of Child Protection Matter Summary form' should not re-produce passages contained in draft supporting affidavits, but may refer to relevant paragraphs of the supporting affidavits or to other relevant documents provided with the referral.

23. The 'Form A – Referral of Child Protection Matter/s Summary form' should also:
- a. provide contact details for the relevant OCFOs and CSSC staff including afterhours contact details;
 - b. state whether Child Safety has applied for an emergency order for the child and the outcome of the application, including:
 - i. the type of emergency order;
 - ii. the date the emergency order ends; and
 - iii. if an emergency order was not made—what were the reasons;
 - c. state whether there is an existing child protection order the child;
 - d. list all previous child protection orders that have been made for the child;
 - e. state whether there is a care agreement for the child;
 - f. state whether there other related proceedings³ or orders, such as:
 - i. a proceeding in which a court is exercising jurisdiction conferred on the court under the Family Law Act 1975 (Cwlth) for the child, or a family law order for the child;⁴
 - ii. a proceeding under the Domestic and Family Violence Protection Act 2012 if each party to the proceeding would be a party to any child protection proceeding, or a domestic violence order already in force if each party to the proceeding would be a party to any child protection proceeding;⁵ and
 - iii. a proceeding before the Queensland Civil and Administrative Tribunal (QCAT) for an application for a review of a reviewable decision under the CP Act, including the decision that is the subject of the review application, and or any QCAT decision on an application for a review of a reviewable decision;⁶
 - iv. related criminal law proceedings;⁷
 - g. list any interim child protection order or orders under section 67 of the CP Act that Child Safety has assessed are necessary for the child's protection pending determination of any application made to court. The referral summary should state the key reasons why the interim order is necessary and the draft supporting affidavits

⁴ See section 52(b) of the CP Act.

⁶ See section 247 and Schedule 2 of the CP Act.

⁷ See section 103 of the CP Act.

should contain sufficient evidence to support the making of an interim child protection order or orders.

24. A 'Form A – Referral of Child Protection Matter/s Summary form' is attached to these Guidelines.

Part 8 Brief of evidence

25. When Child Safety refers a child protection matter to the DCPL, the referral should also include a brief of evidence that includes:
- a. the reasons why the child is a child in need of protection; and
 - b. the reasons why a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; and
 - c. the type and length of child protection order or orders Child Safety considers appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; or
 - d. for a child subject to a child protection order (other than an interim order under section 67 of the CP Act)—reasons why the order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.⁸
26. Child Safety's brief of evidence should also provide:
- a. draft affidavits with attached exhibits evidencing the matters set out in section 16(1)(a) or (b) of the Act as appropriate;
 - b. any other supporting documents that are available to Child Safety; and
 - c. all other documents relevant to the referral that are available to Child Safety at the time of the referral.
27. Affidavits are a critical component of the referral to the DCPL. Further guidance about preparing draft affidavits, including originating affidavits, is set out in Chapter 5 of these Guidelines.

Part 9 Confidential and sensitive information

28. When Child Safety refers a child protection matter to the DCPL that involves sensitive information that should not be disclosed to a parent, Child Safety is to make this clear on the Referral Summary. This includes circumstances where:
- a. Child Safety has made an administrative decision to withhold details of a carer's address from a parent; and
 - b. a parent's address is not known to the other parent and disclosure of the parent's address may endanger the parent's physical or psychological health.
29. Confidential information should be redacted from documents provided to the DCPL by Child Safety that are intended to be filed in a proceeding, such as exhibits to draft affidavits. This includes notifier details, carer's addresses (where Child Safety has made a decision to withhold this information) and third party details or information that could reasonably lead to the identification of these things.

⁸ See section 16(1)(a) and (b) of the Act.

Part 10 Referrals for a child subject to a child protection order

30. Where Child Safety decide to refer a child to the DCPL that is subject to a final child protection order, the referral should be made as soon as practicable and where possible not less than two months before the child protection order ends.

Part 11 Referrals for a child subject to an emergency order

31. Where Child Safety decide to refer a child to the DCPL that is subject to an emergency order the referral should be made as soon as practicable and where possible no later than 24 hours prior to the emergency order ending.
32. If the brief of evidence is not complete by 24 hours before the order ends, the referral should still be made to the DCPL and the brief provided in its current form. The 24 hour period prior to the order ending allows the DCPL time to consider the referral, prepare the application and settle any affidavits. The DCPL and Child Safety also need time to liaise about the need for an extension of an emergency order to be sought by Child Safety. During this 24 hour period Child Safety can continue with the preparation of documents with further information being provided to the DCPL as it becomes available.
33. Where the emergency order is longer, for example a 28 day court assessment order, Child Safety should take reasonable steps to make the referral to the DCPL earlier than 24 hours before the order ends.
34. The DCPL and Child Safety should liaise closely to determine whether an extension of a temporary assessment order (not being followed by a court assessment order) or a temporary custody order should be sought by Child Safety. Where the DCPL has indicated an intention to apply for a child protection order and further time is needed, Child Safety should seek an extension from the court.⁹
35. Reasons why an extension may be necessary include:
- a. so Child Safety can provide further information requested by the DCPL;
 - b. to finalise the application for a child protection order;
 - c. to finalise, compile and swear or affirm the supporting affidavit; or
 - d. to obtain a further affidavit.
36. If the extension is not granted by the court, the DCPL should proceed to deal with the matter before the emergency order ends.
37. Child Safety should ensure that relevant staff are available for urgent consultation and to swear or affirm affidavits when a child subject to an emergency order is referred to the DCPL.

⁹ In granting an extension of a temporary assessment order or a temporary custody order, as well as being satisfied the DCPL intends to apply for a child protection order, under section 34(2) and 51AH(2) of the CP Act, the court needs to be satisfied the original grounds for making the order still exist.

38. The DCPL and Child Safety should work together in a way that ensures that a child subject to an emergency order has their ongoing protection and care needs meet.
39. A referral to the DCPL for a child that is subject to an emergency order must be dealt with by the DCPL deciding to either make an application for a child protection order, or refer the matter back to Child Safety before the emergency order ends.
40. The DCPL and Child Safety should liaise closely to ensure that any consultation takes place prior to the emergency order ending, and with sufficient time for the DCPL to deal with the referral.
41. Close collaboration is particularly important for temporary assessment orders (that are not followed by a court assessment order) and temporary custody orders, both of which last for three business days with the possibility of extension for one business day. These orders may be extended for one business day only if the court is satisfied the DCPL has received a referral for the child protection matter and intends to apply for a child protection order.¹⁰ It is, therefore, important that Child Safety make the referral to the DCPL at the earliest possible opportunity.

Chapter 3 –Dealing with a child protection matter

Part 1 Initial review following referral of a child protection matter

42. The DCPL should conduct an initial review of the referral and supporting material as soon as practicable after receipt (unless the child is subject to an emergency order, which is dealt with in Chapter 2, Part 11 above). The DCPL's paramount consideration when conducting the review is the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child.
43. The purpose of the initial review is to:
 - a. assess the referral and the sufficiency of evidence to support the recommendation by Child Safety;
 - b. identify whether further information or evidence is required under section 17(2) of the Act prior to making a decision; and
 - c. identify whether consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety prior to the DCPL making a decision is necessary.
44. Where the DCPL agrees with Child Safety's recommendation and do not intend to request further evidence or information prior to making a decision they should proceed to make a decision on the referral.
45. Where the DCPL identifies an issue about the sufficiency of evidence to support the recommendation or any other matter, they should contact Child Safety to initiate consultation.

¹⁰ Sections 34 and 51AH of the CP Act.

Part 2 Consultation with Child Safety

46. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety as necessary to clarify any issues arising from the DCPL's initial review of the child protection matter before reaching a final decision about how to deal with the matter. Consultation should occur in a timely manner.
47. The DCPL must consult with Child Safety about relevant matters, including perceived gaps or weaknesses in the evidence, before deciding to:
 - a. apply for a child protection order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different from, the order recommended by Child Safety. This includes applying for a child protection order of a different duration to that recommended by Child Safety; or
 - b. refer the child protection matter back to Child Safety.¹¹
48. If after consultation, Child Safety change the recommendation about the type and/or duration of child protection order considered appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, Child Safety should provide written confirmation of this to the DCPL.

Part 3 Requests for further evidence or information to assist in decision making

49. The DCPL can request further evidence or information from Child Safety before making a decision about a referral.¹² For example, information about the impact of a parent's drug use on their capacity to meet the protection and care needs of the child.
50. Requests for further evidence or information prior to the DCPL making a decision should be made following the initial review of the referral or as soon as possible after that to ensure there is sufficient time for the request to be considered and actioned by Child Safety.
51. When the DCPL seek further evidence or information from Child Safety about a child protection matter before making a decision, the child protection matter should not be taken to have been referred back to Child Safety. A child protection matter is only referred back to Child Safety when the DCPL makes a final decision to refer the child protection matter back to Child Safety under section 17(1) of the Act instead of filing an application for a child protection order.
52. Section 23(2) of the Act requires Child Safety to take reasonable steps to provide the information requested by the DCPL. This applies to information requested under sections 17(2) and 23(1) of the Act. Child Safety should also take reasonable steps to provide further information requested by the DCPL as soon as possible.

¹¹ See section 18(1) of the Act.

¹² See sections 17(2) and 23(1) of the Act.

Part 4 Making a decision about a child protection matter

53. The DCPL can deal with a child protection matter by:
 - a. applying for a child protection order; or
 - b. referring the matter back to Child Safety.¹³
54. Once a matter has been referred to the DCPL, Child Safety cannot withdraw the referral. The referral can only be dealt with by the DCPL.
55. If a child's circumstances change after a referral has been made, and Child Safety is satisfied the child is no longer a child in need of protection and/or a child protection order is no longer appropriate and desirable, this information should be provided to the DCPL and this will be taken into account by the DCPL when making a decision about the matter.

Part 5 Factors the DCPL should have regard to

56. In deciding how to deal with a child protection matter, the DCPL should have regard to all of the information provided by Child Safety with the referral.
57. The DCPL should apply for a child protection order if the DCPL is satisfied there is sufficient evidence to establish on a prima facie basis that:
 - a. the child is a child in need of protection; and
 - b. a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.
58. The safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child must be the DCPL's paramount consideration in deciding how to deal with a child protection matter. Other factors the DCPL should have regard to include:
 - a. the sufficiency of evidence to establish that the child:
 - i. has suffered significant harm, is suffering significant harm, or is at unacceptable risk of suffering significant harm; and
 - ii. does not have a parent able and willing to protect the child from harm;
 - b. the child's views and wishes;
 - c. whether the child's protection and care needs could be met by an order on less intrusive terms than that recommended by Child Safety. Relevant factors may include:
 - i. cultural considerations about how the proposed order may impact on the child's identity and future links to their family and community;
 - ii. the nature and impact of any support previously provided to the child and the child's parents by Child Safety or other agencies;
 - iii. progress made by the parents toward building their capacity to meet the child's protection and care needs;
 - iv. information available about a member of the child's family or community who may be a suitable person to be granted custody or guardianship of the child, and ¹³ See section 17(1) of the Act.

- Child Safety's assessment about the suitability of that person including consultation with the person;
- d. whether there is a case plan for the child that is appropriate for meeting the child's assessed protection and care needs;
 - e. the principles contained in sections 5B to 5E of the CP Act to the extent they are relevant.
59. The DCPL should also identify and consider what other evidence not included in the brief may be available to support an application for a child protection order, and proceed with the application immediately with the further supporting evidence to be filed at a later time. This will be particularly relevant where the child is subject to an emergency order at the time of the referral of the child protection matter to the DCPL and a decision must be made urgently. For example, when the concerns relate to physical injuries to a child there may be detailed medical evidence that has not been obtained at the time the child protection matter is referred to the DCPL. This medical evidence may be necessary to support an allegation that the child has suffered physical harm, or to explain the likely cause of the injury. However, the DCPL should consider whether it is appropriate to apply for a child protection order, relying on preliminary medical information obtained by Child Safety from a doctor or the police, on the basis that when a detailed medical report has been prepared it will be obtained and filed in support of the application.

Part 6 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children

60. The additional principles in section 5C of the CP Act apply to all decision making by the DCPL for Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander children. These principles underscore the importance of protecting and promoting an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child's connection to their family, culture and community. The section 5C principles state:
- a. the child should be allowed to develop and maintain a connection with the child's family, culture, traditions, language and community; and
 - b. the long-term effect of a decision on the child's identity and connection with their family and community should be taken into account.
61. When the DCPL is making a decision about an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, the DCPL must provide the recognised entity for the child with an opportunity to participate in the decision making process. However, the DCPL is not required to consult with the recognised entity directly where the DCPL is satisfied Child Safety has given the recognised entity an opportunity to participate in the decision making process.¹⁴ This should include consultation between Child Safety and the recognised entity about the decision to make:
- a. a referral to the DCPL; and
 - b. Child Safety's recommendation about what type and duration of child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.
62. Child Safety should include information in the brief of evidence provided with the referral to assist the DCPL to be satisfied there has been consultation with the recognised entity. If the DCPL require further information about the child's Aboriginal tradition or Island custom, the DCPL may request Child Safety to consult further with the recognised entity on a specified matter. For example, the DCPL may consider that additional information about the child's connection to their family, culture, traditions, language and community is required.

63. Where Child Safety has been unable to consult with the recognised entity because the recognised entity is not available or urgent action is required to protect the child, Child Safety should advise the DCPL. In these circumstances Child Safety should consult with the recognised entity as soon as practicable after the referral has been made.¹⁵
64. If the DCPL propose to make a decision on a referral that is different from Child Safety's recommendation, there should be further consultation between Child Safety and the recognised entity about the DCPL's proposed decision. Child Safety should provide the DCPL with the outcome of the consultation for consideration by the DCPL in decision making about the referral.
65. The views of the recognised entity about the child's Aboriginal tradition or Island custom is also a mandatory consideration for the court. Section 6(4) of the CP Act provides that before exercising a power under the Act, the court must consider:
 - a. the views of the recognised entity about the child and the child's Aboriginal tradition or Island custom; and
 - b. the general principle that an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child should be cared for within an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander community.
66. The recognised entity is a participant in a child protection proceeding and can also provide the views of the recognised entity to the court orally or in writing.¹⁶

Part 7 Referring a matter back

67. When the DCPL refers a child protection matter back to Child Safety, the DCPL's involvement is at an end. The DCPL cannot give directions to Child Safety about how to deal with the child's case when referring a child protection matter back to Child Safety.
68. When referring a child protection matter back to Child Safety, the DCPL should provide written feedback to Child Safety about the reasons why the DCPL decided not to apply for a child protection order, including any issues with the sufficiency of evidence and this may be addressed. In circumstances where Child Safety do not agree that the matter should be referred back, this information should be included in the written reasons provided to Child Safety under section 18 of the Act (see Chapter 3, Part 10 of the Guidelines). Where Child Safety agree that the matter should be referred back, the DCPL should include this information in the decision notification referred to in guideline 75. Child Safety may request that the DCPL conduct an internal review of the decision to refer a matter back using Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form attached to these Guidelines.
69. A child protection matter that is referred back to Child Safety can be referred to the DCPL again at any time if:

¹⁵ See section 6(3) of the CP Act.

¹⁶ See rule 36(d) and 47(2) of the Rules.

- a. further information is obtained by Child Safety that is material to determining whether the child is a child in need of protection and/or whether a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; or
- b. for a child that is subject to a child protection order (other than an interim order under section 67 of the CP Act)—further information is obtained by Child Safety that is material to determining whether the order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; or
- c. there is a material change in the child's circumstances; or
- d. other relevant information or circumstances indicate the DCPL should consider the matter again.

Part 8 Notification of decision

70. When the DCPL makes a decision about a child protection matter they should provide prompt written notice of the decision to Child Safety in the 'Form B – Director's decision Notification Form' attached to these Guidelines. The DCPL should provide the decision notification to Child Safety electronically via SharePoint as soon as practicable, and at the latest by the next business day.

Part 9 Telling the child's family and the recognised entity about the DCPL's decision

71. Child Safety should tell the child's parents about the DCPL's decision and explain what the decision means. Child Safety should also tell the child about the DCPL's decision where Child Safety consider that is appropriate having regard to the child's age or ability to understand.
72. Where the DCPL's decision relates to a child that is an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, Child Safety should advise the recognised entity of the DCPL's decision.

Part 10 Written reasons for decision

73. In addition to notifying Child Safety about the outcome of a referral, under section 18(2) of the Act, the DCPL must also provide written reasons to Child Safety when the DCPL decide to:
 - a. apply for a child protection order of a different type, or that is otherwise different, from that recommended by Child Safety; or
 - b. refer a matter back to Child Safety.
74. For example, written reasons are required if the:
 - a. DCPL decide not to apply for a child protection order;
 - b. DCPL decide to apply for a child protection order granting long-term guardianship of the child to the chief executive, but Child Safety recommended that an application for a short-term guardianship order be made; or
 - c. DCPL decide to apply for a child protection order of the same type but for a different duration than that recommended by Child Safety.

75. The DCPL officer that made the decision must complete the 'Form C – Director's Written Reasons for Decision form' attached to these Guidelines, which should include in clear and unambiguous language the reasons why and the evidence relied upon by the DCPL when deciding to:
- a. apply for a child protection order of a different type, or that is otherwise different, to that recommended by Child Safety; or
 - b. refer the child protection matter back to Child Safety.
76. The DCPL is to provide the 'Form C – Director's Written Reasons for Decision form' to Child Safety within five business days of the date of decision unless the decision relates to a child that is subject to:
- a. a child protection order (other than an interim order under section 67 of the CP Act) that is ending within one month of the date of decision; or
 - b. an emergency order.
77. Where the child is subject to a final child protection order that is ending within one month of the date of decision, or an emergency order, the written reasons must be provided at the same time as the notification of the decision.
78. If after consultation Child Safety agree with the DCPL's decision about the child protection matter, written reasons are not required. If there is no agreement to the DCPL applying for a child protection order of a different type, or an order that is otherwise different from the order Child Safety considered appropriate and desirable, Child Safety may request that the DCPL conduct an internal review of the decision to refer a matter back using Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form attached to these Guidelines.

Chapter 4 – Ongoing collaboration following a decision to apply for a child protection order

Part 1 Preparing the case for filing

79. Where the DCPL decide to apply for a child protection order, the DCPL and Child Safety should work together closely and efficiently to ensure the application and supporting affidavit are finalised and filed as quickly as possible, prior to the expiry of any current order for the child.
80. In particular, the DCPL and Child Safety should liaise closely to progress the following tasks:
- a. any requests for further information, including requests for further affidavits, under section 23(1) of the Act;
 - b. the settling of the affidavit in support by the DCPL;
 - c. any consultation necessary to progress the case;
 - d. swearing or affirming the affidavit in support; and
 - e. providing a copy of the sworn or affirmed affidavit to the DCPL via SharePoint.
81. Affidavits prepared by Child Safety should comply with Part 8, Division 2 of the Childrens Court Rules 2016 (the Rules). In particular
- a. all pages of the affidavit, including exhibits, should be paginated;

- b. as far as practicable, where there is more than one documentary exhibit, the exhibits should:
 - i. be bound in one or more paginated books;
 - ii. have a certificate in the approved form on or attached to the front of the book; and
 - iii. have an index to the book immediately after the certificate.
- 82. Child Safety should ensure that a copy of sworn or affirmed affidavits are provided to the DCPL via SharePoint as soon as practicable, so as to provide sufficient time for filing in court prior to the expiry of any current emergency or final child protection order. Child Safety should keep a copy of the sworn or affirmed affidavit for their file and forward the original to the DCPL as soon as practicable.

Part 2 Requests for further information

- 83. After receipt of the referral, the DCPL can request Child Safety provide further information from any time until the application for a child protection order has been decided or otherwise determined by the court.¹⁷ This includes requests for further affidavits after an application has been filed in preparation for a court event, including a final hearing. It also includes information that may not be in DCSSDS' possession at the time of the request. Section 23(2) of the Act requires Child Safety to take reasonable steps to provide the information requested by the DCPL. Child Safety should also take reasonable steps to provide further information requested by the DCPL as quickly as possible.

Part 3 Requests for independent expert assessments

- 84. When the DCPL decide that an independent expert assessment is necessary to support an application for a child protection order, they should notify Child Safety promptly.
- 85. Section 23(2) of the Act requires Child Safety to provide information to DCPL, including an independent expert assessment, where it is reasonable to expect Child Safety to take that step in all of the circumstances of the case.
- 86. Where Child Safety agree the independent expert assessment is necessary, Child Safety and the DCPL should work together to identify the expert and develop the terms of reference, although Child Safety are ultimately responsible for deciding the content of the terms of reference.
- 87. Where Child Safety do not agree that an independent expert assessment (or other information requested by the DCPL) is necessary, there should be consultation between DCPL and Child Safety to explore whether there may be other ways to obtain relevant information, such as through a request by Child Safety under section 159N of the CP Act or by way of subpoena.
- 88. If after consultation Child Safety decide not to engage an independent expert assessment or provide the information requested, this may have implications for the

DCPL's assessment of the sufficiency of evidence to support an application for a child protection order.

89. To avoid any doubt, where an independent expert assessment of a person is requested and organised by Child Safety, but the assessment cannot be completed because the person does not consent to participate, Child Safety will have taken reasonable steps to provide the information requested by the DCPL. This assumes the person has refused consent after being fully informed about the nature and purpose of the assessment in a way that is appropriate to support their informed consent.

Chapter 5 – Affidavit evidence

Part 1 Affidavits generally

90. Affidavits should be prepared in a manner that is balanced and fair. As well as including evidence that supports the application, affidavits should also include evidence that does not support the application. It should be apparent that this positive or contrary information has been taken into account in the assessment of the child.
91. Affidavits should contain only relevant information and should be well-structured. They should not be repetitive, and should not contain legal argument.
92. As far as possible, affidavits should not contain hearsay evidence. If an affidavit is to contain a statement based on information and belief, it must include the sources of the information and the grounds for the belief.

Part 2 Originating affidavits

93. The originating affidavit should:
- a. include sufficient evidence to establish that the child is a child in need of protection. For example, in risk of harm cases there should be sufficient evidence to establish each concern giving rise to an unacceptable risk of significant harm to a child. Where it is alleged that a parent's drug use is causing an unacceptable risk of harm to a child, the affidavit should contain sufficient evidence to prove that allegation to the requisite standard (the balance of probabilities). Evidence may include results of drug screen testing, criminal histories, information from police such as police occurrence summaries, observations of Child Safety staff or of other agencies, information from health care providers or drug treatment services or statements made by the parent;
 - b. include sufficient evidence to establish that there is no parent able and willing to protect the child from harm. This includes evidence of how the concerns impact on the parent's ability to meet the child's protection and care needs. There should be an assessment in respect of each parent, or where the identity or whereabouts of a parent is not known, the affidavit should evidence the reasonable steps taken by Child Safety to ascertain the identity and whereabouts of a parent; and
 - c. focus on current concerns. Evidence of a previous or resolved child protection concern should only be included if it is relevant to the current assessment in some way. The affidavit should make it clear that the concern is resolved, or there is no evidence that the concern is current, however, the relevance must be explained.

94. The originating affidavit should also contain information including but not limited to:
- a. the needs of the child and how these are being met;
 - b. the views and wishes of the child, and how they have been taken into account in the circumstances and having regard to the child's age or ability to understand;
 - c. the nature and impact of any support previously provided to the child and the child's parents by Child Safety or other agencies where relevant;
 - d. the parents' compliance with case plan actions and progress made including attendance at contact visits where relevant;
 - e. the living and contact arrangements for the child, including contact with siblings and extended family, and how they meet the child's needs (this is an express requirement for long-term guardianship orders under section 59(1)(b)(iii) of the CP Act);
 - f. why the order sought is necessary, including an assessment of why the child's care and protection could not be achieved by less intrusive means;
 - g. for a long-term guardianship order in favour of the chief executive, why guardianship could not properly be granted to another suitable person in preference to the chief executive; and
 - h. for an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, information about:
 - i. Child Safety's engagement and consultation with the recognised entity in decision making for the child; and
 - ii. the views of the recognised entity about the child and about Aboriginal tradition and Island custom for the child.

Part 3 Complying with rule 13

95. If the documents listed in rule 13 of the Rules are in the possession of Child Safety and are relevant to the referral, these documents should be exhibited to a draft affidavit accompanying the referral. The documents required by rule 13 are:
- a. the assessment of the alleged harm, or alleged risk of harm, to the child carried out by Child Safety that formed the basis of the referral of the child protection matter to the DCPL, including the outcome of that assessment;
 - b. the most recent strengths and needs assessment for the child and the child's parents;
 - c. documents relating to the most recently completed family group meeting for the child including a case plan if a plan was developed at the meeting;
 - d. previous applications or orders made for the child under the CP Act, including temporary assessment orders or court assessment orders;
 - e. referrals to an external agency that provides support to the child or a member of the child's family, such as Queensland Health or a domestic and family violence service;
 - f. any independent assessment or report about the child or the child's parent, such as a psychological or psychiatric assessment or a social assessment report;
 - g. the child's birth certificate;
 - h. any child protection history report of a person relevant to the proceeding;
 - i. any criminal history, domestic violence history or traffic history of a person relevant to the proceeding.
96. If it is not practicable for Child Safety to provide a draft affidavit exhibiting the documents listed in rule 13 with the referral, this must be provided to the DCPL as soon as practicable afterward, as unless otherwise provided for, they must be filed within 10 business days after the first appearance for an application. In addition, the referral summary should include a brief explanation for this and indicate when the draft affidavit is likely to be provided to the DCPL. This information will be used to determine whether an extension of time must be sought from the court and the length of time required.

Part 4 Affidavits prepared after the application is filed

97. Affidavits prepared after the application is filed have the principal purpose of updating the court about matters relevant to the application. These affidavits should not exhibit documents that have been exhibited to earlier affidavits filed in the proceeding. These should be comprised of direct rather than hearsay evidence wherever possible. If an affidavit is to contain a statement based on information and belief, it must include the sources of the information and the grounds for the belief.

Part 5 Preparing and exhibiting a child protection history report

98. A child protection history report can provide important information to the court in a case where a child or the child's parent is previously known to Child Safety (or to a child protection agency in another State). It is understood that Child Safety assessments will consider all of the child's circumstances, including things that happened in the past where relevant.
99. However, a child protection history report that is to be filed in support of an application should be prepared with care. The essence of the task is to balance the requirement to properly inform the court of the broader context in which the current application should be decided; against the requirement to present relevant and, reliable evidence to the court, and to be fair to other parties.
100. A decision about what information to include should be made on a case by case basis. It is not as simple as including substantiated concerns and leaving out unsubstantiated concerns. Unsubstantiated concerns may be relevant in a particular case. For example, where:
- a. the concern was not substantiated at the time of the original investigation and assessment, however, the information is relevant to the current assessment because the concern is the same; and
 - b. there was a positive assessment of a parent's willingness and ability to protect the child (particularly if the concern is of a similar nature to the current concerns).
101. Child Safety should exercise caution when including information where no steps were taken to investigate the veracity or reliability of the information.
102. If, in preparing a child protection history report, information is not included, for reasons including those set out above, the child protection history report should make this clear, for example, by being titled 'relevant child protection history report'.

Part 6 Information received under section 159N of the CP Act

103. Where written information received by Child Safety under section 159N of the CP Act has been taken into account in the assessment, or is relevant to the referral to the DCPL, that document should be attached to a Child Safety affidavit as an exhibit in preference to describing the contents of the document in the affidavit. Consent of the agency to use the document in court proceedings should be obtained.

104. Where information is received by Child Safety orally under section 159N of the CP Act, Child Safety should ask the agency to provide the information in writing and seek their permission to use the document for the purposes of court proceedings. Where this is not practicable or where the agency is unwilling to provide the information in writing, or to consent to the use of their written information, Child Safety should make a case note of the conversation and attach the case note as an exhibit to the affidavit. After the application has been filed, the DCPL can consider issuing a subpoena to the agency for the production of documents relevant to the proceeding.

105. Pursuant to section 105(1) of the CP Act, the Childrens Court is not bound by the rules of evidence, but may inform itself in any way it thinks appropriate. This does not mean that the rules of evidence do not apply. The Childrens Court must conduct proceedings in a manner that ensures all parties are afforded procedural fairness. The rules of evidence should, therefore, be adhered to wherever possible, including the rule against hearsay.
106. This means that, wherever possible, evidence should be tendered by the person with direct knowledge of the matter. For example, evidence about the child's contact with a parent should be provided by the person who supervised the contact, such as the child safety support officer providing an affidavit exhibiting their case note of the contact. This is preferable to the information being provided in a hearsay form in the allocated child safety officer's affidavit prepared from Child Safety case notes. If a standalone affidavit is unable to be obtained, a report, letter or case note prepared by the person with direct knowledge of the matter should be exhibited to a departmental affidavit. Only in circumstances when an affidavit, report, letter or case note cannot be obtained should the hearsay evidence of the person be included in the affidavit of a departmental officer. Where there is a relevant contemporaneous case note, for example of a telephone conversation between a child safety officer and a doctor, it should be attached as an exhibit to the affidavit.
107. Sometimes a person with direct knowledge of the matter may be reluctant to provide an affidavit because they have a relationship with the child or the child's parent, which they do not want to compromise, such as a family support worker.
108. Where the relationship may be damaged if the person provides evidence to the court, the DCPL and Child Safety should consider whether the evidence is necessary, even if it is relevant. If, for example, the case is strong without this evidence, the DCPL may decide not to seek the affidavit or not to seek the affidavit until later in the proceedings when it becomes clear it is necessary. In deciding how to deal with this type of information, the DCPL and Child Safety should have regard to the relationship between the child or parent and the person and, as much as possible, proceed in a way that preserves that relationship.

109. Where the DCPL decide the evidence of a person working with or who has a therapeutic relationship with the child or the child's parent is necessary, Child Safety should ensure the person understands why they are being asked to provide an affidavit so they can make an informed decision about whether to provide an affidavit. It may assist to explain to a person who has reservations about providing an affidavit that:
- a. their evidence is relevant and necessary for the court to make a fully informed decision in the best interests of the child; and
 - b. they are being asked to detail relevant factual matters, or opinions where appropriate, for the court's consideration. They are not being asked to take a position against a parent. Their observations or opinions that do not support the application are as relevant as ones that do.
110. The preference for direct evidence does not apply to the evidence of children. There are statutory provisions that provide when a child may give evidence in a child protection proceeding. Only subject children aged 12 years and over can give evidence or be cross-examined; and that this can only happen with the leave of the court, if the child is represented by a lawyer, and if the child agrees.¹⁸ Also, a person can only ask a child, other than a child who is a respondent, to swear or affirm an affidavit with the leave of the court.¹⁹ It follows that it will almost always be preferable for the DCPL to provide a child's evidence to the court in a hearsay form in the affidavit of a Child Safety officer or other appropriate witness.
111. Care should be taken when including things children say about their parents in the 'child's wishes and views' section of an affidavit. The child's relationship with their parents will continue after the litigation has ended, and, as much as possible, should not be adversely affected by the litigation process. Relevant paragraphs should be drafted with care with a view to balancing the requirement to ensure this information is before the court with the importance of preserving enduring family relationships for the child. Often this will come down to not 'what' is said but 'how' it is said.
112. To avoid any doubt, evidence of the child's wishes and views is different from evidence of things the child said that comprise part of the evidence of harm or unacceptable risk of harm. For example, the child's views about where they are staying or their contact with their parents can be distinguished from disclosures the child has made about harm caused to them by a parent. Although this evidence of harm will normally be provided in a hearsay form, it is clearly relevant and necessary evidence for the court.

Chapter 6 - The court process

Part 1 Court case management framework

113. The court case management framework is comprised of three parts:
- a. The Rules;
 - b. The Bench Book; and
 - c. Practice Directions made by the Chief Magistrate.

¹⁸ See section 112 of the CP Act.

¹⁹ See rule 81 of the Rules.

114. Part 7 of the Rules is dedicated to court case management. It provides a framework for how the court must manage a proceeding to ensure the proceeding is resolved in accordance with the objects of the Rules.
115. The overarching objective of the court case management framework is to promote the fair and expeditious resolution of child protection proceedings and to reduce unnecessary delay.
116. The specific aims of the court case management framework are to ensure:
- a. parties to child protection proceedings understand their rights, responsibilities and the court process
 - b. there are more consistent and transparent court processes;
 - c. the court focuses on the best interests of the child; and
 - d. the court actively manages proceedings with assistance from parties.
117. The DCPL and Child Safety should work in partnership to promote the aims of the court case management framework. For example, the DCPL and Child Safety should work together to:
- a. comply with timeframes fixed by the court for the completion of steps in a proceeding; and
 - b. assist the child, if they are participating in the proceeding, and the child's parents to understand their rights, responsibilities and the court process, particularly where they are unrepresented.

Part 2 Filing documents in court

118. The DCPL is responsible for filing all of the applicant's material in court, including the application and supporting affidavits (originating documents). A document must be received by the relevant court registry by 4:30pm on a day the registry is open for business for the document to be taken to be filed in the registry that day.²⁰ Child Safety should ensure that electronic copies of executed affidavits are provided to the DCPL as soon as practicable having regard to filing deadlines.
119. After originating documents are received back from the registry, the DCPL should provide Child Safety with a copy of the sealed:
- a. application; and
 - b. front sheet of the affidavit showing the court's seal and the filing date.
120. These documents should be provided to Child Safety via SharePoint. As the proceeding progresses, the DCPL should also provide Child Safety with a copy of any other filed document via SharePoint as soon as practicable after sealed copies are received from the registry.
121. Where documents are filed electronically, Child Safety will be responsible for making copies of the sealed documents for service on the respondents. Where the DCPL file documents by delivering them to the registry personally or by post, and the registry issues sealed copies, these will be provided to Child Safety for service on the respondents.

²⁰ See rule 17 of the Rules.

Part 3 Service of documents filed by the DCPL

Division 1 Service of documents generally

122. Generally, Child Safety will serve originating documents and other documents filed by the DCPL on the parties to a proceeding, however, other arrangements can be decided on a case by case basis. The exception to this is subpoenas to produce a document or thing, which will be served on the subpoena recipient by the DCPL.
123. Child Safety, wherever practicable, should personally serve a copy of the application on the child's parents.²¹ Personal service, particularly of originating material, is important because of the intrusive nature of the order sought, the likely vulnerability of the child's parents, and the fact they are often not represented by a lawyer at that stage of the proceeding. Child Safety should also tell the child about the application in a manner and to the extent that is appropriate having regard to the child's age and ability to understand.²²
124. Although the child is a party to the proceeding, the Rules provide that, subject to the Act, they may only be served with documents filed in the proceedings if:
- a. they are participating in the proceeding; or
 - b. the court has ordered it.²³
125. A person who personally serves a document on the child's parents should:
- a. explain what the documents are and what the proceedings are about;
 - b. tell the child's parents when the first/next court date is;
 - c. encourage the child's parents to obtain legal advice and give them information about how to contact their local Legal Aid Queensland office or other local community legal service, or if the parent is Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander, assisting them to seek assistance from the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Service (ATSILS);
 - d. tell the child's parents they may bring a support person to court, although whether the person is allowed to be present in the court is at the discretion of the court;
 - e. tell the child's parents they can ask the court for permission to attend a court event by telephone or audio visual link if, for example, it will be difficult for them to attend in person. Child Safety should also provide the parents with information about how they can make the request where the parents indicate they may make a request.²⁴
126. Where Child Safety staff are serving documents filed by the DCPL, they should complete service of the documents as soon as practicable, and no later than three business days before the court event to which the documents relate.²⁵ If Child Safety are unable to comply with this timescale, they should advise the DCPL.
127. After Child Safety staff have effected service of documents filed by the DCPL, the Child Safety staff member who served the documents should provide an affidavit of service.

²¹ See section 56 of the CP Act.

²² See sections 56 and 195 of the CP Act.

²³ See rule 25(2) of the Rules.

²⁴ See rule 48 of the Rules.

²⁵ See rule 26(2) of the Rules.

The affidavit should be executed as quickly as possible after service has been effected, and be provided to the DCPL in electronic form via SharePoint with the original to follow by post or hand delivery.

Division 2 Service on guardians and the public guardian

128. Where the DCPL is required to serve a document on a person in a proceeding, and the DCPL know the person has a guardian, the document must be served on the guardian.²⁶ To assist the DCPL to comply with this obligation, Child Safety should advise the DCPL that a parent has a guardian when this is known to them. Where Child Safety reasonably believe a parent has impaired capacity but they are unsure whether the parent has a guardian, they should take steps to ascertain whether the parent has a guardian, for example, by contacting the QCAT registry to find out if QCAT has appointed a guardian for the parent.
129. If the DCPL reasonably believe a parent has impaired capacity but they are unsure whether the parent has a guardian, they should take steps to ascertain whether the parent has a guardian by seeking information from Child Safety or making enquiries themselves.
130. Where the public guardian has given written notice of an intention to appear in a child protection proceeding under section 108B(2) of the CP Act, they should be treated as a party, which includes serving them with copies of all documents filed by the DCPL in the proceedings.²⁷

Part 4 Duty of disclosure

Division 1 Duty of Disclosure

131. The DCPL has a duty to make full and early disclosure to the parties of all documents in the possession or control of the DCPL that are relevant to a child protection proceeding. This includes applications to make, vary, extend and revoke a child protection order. It also includes applications where the DCPL is a respondent, such as an application to revoke a child protection order made by a parent.²⁸ The DCPL should be proactive and forthcoming in discharging its duty of disclosure, which continues until the proceeding is decided.²⁹ However, the DCPL may refuse to disclose a relevant document in certain circumstances. This is discussed in part 4, division 6 below.
132. The duty of disclosure is intended to ensure the DCPL conducts proceedings on behalf of the State fairly and transparently, in a manner that does not disadvantage other parties, particularly in circumstances where they are not represented by a lawyer. Disclosure also ensures parties to a proceeding are equipped with relevant information so they can respond to the DCPL's case effectively.

²⁶ See rule 33 of the Rules.

²⁷ See rule 39 of the Rules.

²⁸ See section 189C(1) and the definition of child protection order in Schedule 3 of the CP Act.

²⁹ See section 189C of the CP Act.

133. In practice, the DCPL's duty of disclosure is a shared responsibility between the DCPL and Child Safety. Child Safety has a duty to disclose to the DCPL all information that is relevant to a proceeding that is in Child Safety's possession or control. This is also an ongoing duty that continues until the proceeding is finally decided or otherwise ends.³⁰ The DCPL and Child Safety should work together in a timely way to ensure the duty is complied with and that any directions of the court about disclosure can be fulfilled.
134. This means that all relevant documents that come into the possession or control of Child Safety after the DCPL has provided initial disclosure, should be provided to the DCPL for the purposes of disclosure. This is important to ensure the DCPL complies with its duty of disclosure and the model litigant principles generally. Further, the DCPL cannot tender a Child Safety document in a proceeding that has not been disclosed without the leave of the court.³¹

Division 2 Duty to disclose relevant documents in DCPL's possession or control

135. 'Relevance' combined with 'possession or control' set the parameters of the DCPL's overarching duty of disclosure. Every document in Child Safety's possession or control about a child will not necessarily be relevant to a proceeding. To be relevant, the document must be relevant to the matters in issue in the proceeding. A document will be relevant if it tends to prove or disprove an allegation in issue. This includes a document that is likely to be relevant to a party's response to the applicant's case.
136. If a document is not relevant to an allegation in issue, it does not have to be disclosed. When documents contain information that is both relevant and not relevant to a proceeding, the whole document should be disclosed.
137. Possession or control refers to documents that are physically held by the DCPL and Child Safety, and documents that either agency is able to exercise power or command over such as emails, electronic documents and other documents that lack a physical form. It does not include documents that Child Safety has a power to obtain, such as information that can be requested under section 159N of the CP Act. A document in Child Safety's possession or control is deemed to be in the possession or control of the DCPL.³²

Division 3 Disclosure Form

138. Under rule 52 of the Rules, the DCPL must file and serve the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' attached to these Guidelines on each party to a child protection proceeding. The DCPL may file and serve a 'Form D – Disclosure Form' at any time on its own initiative or as directed by the court. Subject to a direction of the court to the contrary, the DCPL must file and serve the Disclosure Form on the parties within 20 days of the first mention date for the proceeding.³³ As set out in Guideline 127, above Child Safety will generally undertake service of the Disclosure Form on the parties, however, other arrangements may be agreed on a case by case basis.

³¹ See section 189D of the CP Act.

³² See section 189C(7) of the CP Act.

³³ See rule 52 of the Rules.

139. The 'Form D – Disclosure Form' includes two lists of documents. The first list is found in Box A, and is comprised of the types of documents that are normally held by Child Safety. The second list is found in Box B, and is a list of specific documents that the DCPL has identified are relevant and should be disclosed. The second list may include a document that:
- a. does not fall within the types of documents contained in the first list; or
 - b. falls within the types of documents contained in the first list, however, because of its particular relevance, the DCPL decide to list it as a specific document that can be requested.
140. If the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' does not list any documents in Box B, Box B should be deleted.
141. To assist the DCPL to comply with the requirement to file the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' within 20 days of the first mention, Child Safety should save as per the following all relevant documents to SharePoint at the time of the referral and then continue to save all relevant documents on an ongoing basis:
- a. save the documents that will be annexed to the Rule 13 affidavit to the 'referral' folder of the child's site in SharePoint;
 - b. save other relevant documents in their possession or control to the 'disclosable documents' folder in SharePoint. Child Safety's approach to determining relevance should be inclusive. This means that if Child Safety staff are unsure whether a document is relevant they should provide it to the DCPL by saving it to SharePoint;
 - c. save correspondence and emails into the 'correspondence (including emails)' subfolder in SharePoint;
 - d. save relevant documents that Child Safety assess the DCPL should refuse to disclose under section 191(2) of the CP Act, in the separate 'non-disclosable documents' subfolder in SharePoint. Child Safety should also save documents that contain confidential information that require redaction before a document is disclosed in the 'non-disclosable documents' subfolder. This includes notifier details, carer's addresses (where Child Safety has made a decision to withhold this information) and third party details or information that could reasonably lead to the identification of these things; and
 - e. advise the DCPL of any document Child Safety assess should be listed as a specific document on the 'Form D – Disclosure Form', because it falls outside the types of documents in the first list or because of the document's particular relevance.
142. Child Safety should provide written confirmation to the DCPL as soon as practicable after the above tasks have been completed. If the DCPL believe there may be other relevant documents that are not saved to SharePoint, the DCPL should consult with OCFOS about this.
143. If the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' lists any documents in Box B, the DCPL should provide OCFOS with a copy of the draft Disclosure Form before it is filed, so OCFOS can provide any feedback to the DCPL before it is filed and served.
144. Where a party is unrepresented, the 'Form D - Disclosure Form' should be served on them personally wherever practicable. This is so the disclosure process, including how they can make a request for disclosure, can be explained. In addition, the party should be shown the information section at the end of the Disclosure Form, and be encouraged to obtain independent legal advice. Child Safety will normally serve the Disclosure Form on unrepresented parties. The DCPL may, however, attend to service of the Disclosure Form where this can be done at a court event.

145. Where a respondent's address is not known to the other respondent/s, it must be redacted from the copy of the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' served on the other respondent/s.
146. A copy of the 'Form E – Request for Disclosure Form' attached to these Guidelines, should be provided with the Disclosure Form when it is served on a party to the proceeding.
147. The filing and service of the 'Form D – Disclosure Form' in a proceeding is unlikely to be sufficient to discharge the DCPL's duty of disclosure. The proactive and ongoing nature of the DCPL's duty of disclosure under the Act is reflected in the Rules, which say that the DCPL may disclose a document at any time.³⁴ The DCPL does not have to wait for the return of the 'Form E – Request for Disclosure Form' before providing disclosure, particularly in a case where there is not a large number of relevant disclosable documents. In these cases the DCPL may provide early disclosure by giving a copy of the relevant disclosable documents to the parties at the earliest opportunity.

Division 4 Requests for disclosure

148. Requests for disclosure of a document or documents by a party should be in writing and may be made using the 'Form E – Request for Disclosure Form'. The request should include an adequate description of the document sought.³⁵
149. Where an unrepresented party does not return the 'Form E – Request for Disclosure Form' or otherwise make a written request for disclosure, the DCPL and Child Safety should work together to ensure this followed up with the party in a timely way. This may involve Child Safety contacting the party ensure they understand they may request the DCPL disclose a particular Child Safety document/s that that are relevant to the proceeding. Where a party needs assistance to understand the type of documents that are referred to in the first list on the Disclosure Form, they should be given this assistance.
150. The DCPL may also contact a party by telephone and/or in writing to them to make sure they understand the disclosure process, and what they may request the DCPL disclose using the 'Form E – Request for Disclosure Form'. In complying with its disclosure obligation, the DCPL should take reasonable steps to ensure a party has the benefit of disclosure of relevant Child Safety documents in the proceeding. Service of the Disclosure Form, particularly on unrepresented parties, on its own, will not normally be enough to satisfy the duty.
151. Where a party is represented, the DCPL should follow-up the return of the 'Form E – Disclosure Request Form' with their lawyer.

³⁴ See rule 55(1) of the Rules.

³⁵ See rule 53 (1) and (2) of the Rules.

Division 5 Providing disclosure

152. The DCPL should be forthcoming in providing disclosure under the CP Act. This may involve proactively disclosing relevant documents in a proceeding at an early stage prior to the return of the 'Form E - Request for Disclosure Form'. In other cases, this may involve providing disclosure following receipt of the Request for Disclosure Form. Complying with the duty of disclosure will require strong collaboration and partnership working between the DCPL and Child Safety. In particular, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety about the documents that have been saved to SharePoint and about whether there are other relevant documents in Child Safety's possession or control that are not yet saved to SharePoint. Where particular documents or classes of documents are requested by a party, Child Safety should ensure that all requested documents are saved to SharePoint as soon as reasonably practicable. This will assist the DCPL to respond to the request as soon as reasonably practicable as required under the Rules.³⁶
153. Responsibility for redaction of confidential information from Child Safety documents and records that are being provided in compliance with the DCPL's duty of disclosure, should be shared equally between the DCPL and Child Safety. This includes redaction of notifier details, carer's addresses (where Child Safety has made a decision to withhold this information) and third party details or information that could reasonably lead to the identification of these things. Where the DCPL undertakes the redaction of confidential information from documents that are otherwise disclosable, DCPL may request Child Safety to review particular redacted documents and provide the DCPL with written confirmation that all confidential information has been redacted.
154. The DCPL is responsible for deciding what documents are being disclosed and what documents are not being disclosed, because they are not relevant or because they fall within a ground for non-disclosure under section 191(2) of the CP Act.
155. Disclosure can be provided either by inspection or service. Inspection may be useful particularly in matters with a large volume of disclosure documents. The DCPL and OCFOs should consult about how disclosure will be provided in each case.
156. Where disclosure is being provided by inspection, this will take place at a location mutually agreed between the DCPL and OCFOs. The DCPL is responsible for providing written notice to the parties of the place and time the documents can be inspected. Where disclosure by inspection occurs at a CSSC, Child Safety should make copies of the documents requested by the inspecting party. The copies should then be saved to SharePoint in a single document entitled 'bundle of disclosure documents requested by [name of party] on [date]'. The DCPL is responsible for providing the requested documents to the inspecting party.³⁷
157. Where disclosure is being provided by service, the DCPL should provide a bundle of disclosure documents to the party either in hard copy form or electronic form depending on the party's circumstances, including whether they are represented by a lawyer. The DCPL should also save the bundle of disclosure documents to SharePoint in a single document entitled 'bundle of disclosure documents provided to [name of party] on [date]'.

³⁶ See rule 52(3) of the Rules.

³⁷ See rule 56(2) of the Rules.

158. Before disclosure is provided, the DCPL must tell parties who inspect and/or receive copies of documents under the disclosure provisions of the CP Act, that it is an offence to, directly or indirectly, disclose or make use of the documents other than for a purpose connected to the proceeding.³⁸
159. When the DCPL provides disclosure of documents to a party, the DCPL may also make the document available to any other party to the proceeding. Where a party requests disclosure of a document or documents provided to another party, the DCPL must provide immediate disclosure of the document or documents to the other party, subject to the non-disclosure grounds under section 191(2) of the CP Act.³⁹ It may be that a particular ground for non-disclosure applies to one party but not another party in the proceeding. For example, disclosure of document (or part of a document) to one party may be likely to endanger the safety or psychological health of a person, however, disclosure of that information to another party may not give rise to these risks.
160. The DCPL should be diligent in ensuring that disclosure is up to date by the court ordered conference. If this is not practicable, the DCPL should bring this to the court's attention so the conference can be rescheduled. Disclosure also needs to be up to date before a hearing of an application. The DCPL should seek directions from the court to ensure disclosure is completed before a court ordered conference or a hearing of the application as appropriate.⁴⁰
161. The DCPL does not have to file a document it discloses to a party to the proceeding, unless the Rules require the document to be filed or the court directs that the document be filed.⁴¹ Where the DCPL intends to rely on the document, it should comprise part of the evidence filed by the DCPL in support of the application.

Division 6 Non-disclosure under section 191 of the CP Act

162. When the DCPL is disclosing documents to a party, the DCPL must notify the party of any document the DCPL is refusing to disclose under section 191(2) of the CP Act.
163. Where the DCPL refuses to disclose a relevant document on a ground set out in section 191(2) of the CP Act, the DCPL must give the party written notice of the non-disclosure decision stating:
 - a. the ground for non-disclosure;
 - b. the DCPL is not required to disclose the document, unless the court orders disclosure, and disclosure will then be on the terms ordered by the court; and
 - c. they can apply to court for an order requiring the DCPL to disclose the document under section 191 of the CP Act.⁴²

³⁸ See section 189E of the CP Act.

³⁹ See rule 57 of the Rules.

⁴⁰ See rules 52(4), 55 and 58(2).

⁴¹ See rule 59 of the Rules.

⁴² See sections 191(4) and (5) of the CP Act.

164. The DCPL should refuse to disclose a relevant document or part of a relevant document that falls within one of the grounds for non-disclosure mentioned in section 191(2) of the CP Act. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety about decisions to refuse disclosure of a relevant document as required.

Division 7 Disclosure compliance notice

165. The DCPL must provide written notice to the court that the duty of disclosure has been complied with ('Form F - Disclosure Compliance Notice Form' is attached to these Guidelines).⁴³ The DCPL should file and serve the notice on the parties prior to seeking a final determination of an application.⁴⁴ Until a 'Form F - Disclosure Compliance Notice Form' has been filed, the court cannot decide the proceeding.⁴⁵
166. Examples of when the DCPL may seek to file a 'Form F - Disclosure Compliance Notice Form' include:
- a. before the hearing of the proceeding; and
 - b. prior to asking the court to make a child protection order in accordance with a resolution reached at a court ordered conference.
167. The DCPL may file more than one 'Form F - Disclosure Compliance Notice Form' before a proceeding is finally decided.

Part 5 Subpoenas for production of documents or things

Division 1 Requesting subpoenas to produce

168. A subpoena to produce a document or thing (subpoena to produce) can be requested by a party to the proceeding. A 'subpoena to produce' may also be issued by the court on its own initiative.⁴⁶
169. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety in deciding whether it is necessary to request one or more subpoenas to produce in a particular matter. The DCPL is then responsible for requesting subpoenas to produce in child protection proceedings. This includes drafting the request and filing the request in court. The request must be in the approved form and comply with the Rules.⁴⁷
170. Subpoenas to produce should not be issued as a matter of course in every case. Instead, they should be requested when necessary, and their scope should be appropriately targeted when a particular document or class of documents is sought.

Division 2 Service of subpoenas to produce

171. The DCPL is responsible for service of subpoenas to produce on the subpoena recipient and the parties.

⁴³ See rule 61 of the Rules.

⁴⁴ See rule 26 of the Rules.

⁴⁵ See rule 61 of the Rules.

⁴⁶ See rule 94(1)(b) of the Rules.

⁴⁷ See rule 93 of the Rules.

Division 3 Conduct money

172. Conduct money is a sum of money paid to a subpoena recipient to meet their reasonable expenses of complying with the subpoena, including accessing and copying information. Conduct money is not payable to subpoena recipients who are employees or agencies of the State where they are not a party to or a participant in the proceeding.⁴⁸ This means that conduct money will not be payable to a department that is responsible for public health, education, housing services or the police.
173. Where conduct money is payable, the DCPL is responsible for payment. Although the DCPL is generally responsible for service of subpoenas to produce, where Child Safety agree to effect service, the DCPL will provide conduct money, in the form of a cheque, at the same time as the 'subpoena to produce' is provided to Child Safety for service. In these circumstances, Child Safety should ensure that, as well as serving the 'subpoena to produce' on the subpoena recipient, they also provide the cheque in payment of conduct money to the subpoena recipient.
174. Where Child Safety effect service of a 'subpoena to produce', the Child Safety staff member who served the subpoena should provide an affidavit of service. The affidavit should be executed as quickly as possible after service has been effected and be provided to the DCPL in electronic form via SharePoint, with the original to follow by post or hand delivery.

Division 4 Inspection and copying of material returned under subpoena

175. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety before making an application to inspect and copy material returned under a 'subpoena to produce'. The purpose of the consultation is to discuss whether there are any conditions the DCPL should request the court to impose in granting parties access to the material returned under the 'subpoena to produce'. For example, if the subpoena addresses a personal medical history of one of the parents, where the parties are legally represented, the DCPL may ask that only legal representatives be allowed to inspect and copy material returned under a 'subpoena to produce'.
176. The DCPL is responsible for inspecting material returned under a 'subpoena to produce', and if the court has given permission to copy the documents, for identifying and copying relevant documents. The DCPL should provide Child Safety with a copy of all documents copied.
177. The DCPL is responsible for compiling the bundle of subpoenaed material on which the DCPL intends to rely at a hearing, and for the indexing and paginating the bundle. Where a bundle of subpoenaed material is prepared by the DCPL, the DCPL will provide a copy of the bundle to Child Safety.

⁴⁸ See rule 100(2) of the Rules.

Part 6 Witnesses

Division 1 Coordination of witnesses

178. The DCPL and OCFOS should work together to identify witnesses who will give evidence at a hearing. OCFOS will liaise with witnesses in the lead up to the hearing about availability and other practical matters relating to giving evidence.
179. The DCPL is responsible for coordination of witnesses during a hearing, although the DCPL may be assisted by an OCFOS officer where they are in attendance at the hearing.

Division 2 Giving evidence in person or by audio visual link or audio link

180. Witnesses giving evidence as part of the DCPL's case should attend court in person, particularly Child Safety staff.
181. The DCPL may request permission from the court for a witness, particularly an expert witness, to give evidence by audio visual link or audio link.⁴⁹ In exceptional circumstances, the DCPL may request permission from the court for a Child Safety witness to give evidence remotely. For example, when the witness is unable to attend court due to illness or is no longer working for Child Safety, and lives a long distance from the court. Requests can be made in writing prior to the court event or orally at a preceding court event. The court can also make a direction allowing a witness to give evidence remotely at a future court event on its own initiative.
182. The decision about whether to request permission for a witness to give evidence remotely rests with the DCPL. In deciding whether to make a request, the DCPL may consult with Child Safety to discuss the request and to obtain further information relevant to the request, such as the location of the witness and, in the case of an expert witness, the impact of appearing in person on their work commitments. Child Safety may approach the DCPL when they believe a request should be made for permission for a particular witness to give evidence by audio visual link or audio link. Child Safety should make contact with the DCPL about this as soon as possible, and before the review mention is held in the lead up to the hearing.
183. Where the DCPL make a written request for permission for a witness to give evidence by audio visual link or audio link, the request should comply with rule 48(2) of the Rules. In particular, rule 48(2) requires the person making the request to inform the court about:
- a. how and when notice of the request was given to the other participants to the proceeding;
 - b. whether any of the other participants object to the request; and
 - c. whether they are aware of any issues in the proceeding that are likely to be contested during the appearance.
184. When requested by the DCPL, Child Safety should assist the DCPL by obtaining the information required by rule 48(2) from parties and participants in the proceeding. The DCPL should request Child Safety's assistance to obtain this information as soon as practicable prior to the appearance. Child Safety should take reasonable steps to obtain this information and provide it to the DCPL with sufficient time for the DCPL to make the request prior to the court appearance.

Division 3 Subpoenas to attend to give evidence

185. A subpoena for a person to attend court to give evidence (subpoena to attend), can be requested by a party to the proceeding or can be issued by the court on its own initiative.⁵⁰
186. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety as necessary in deciding whether to request one or more subpoenas to attend to give evidence in a particular matter. The DCPL is then responsible for requesting 'subpoenas to attend'. This includes drafting the request and filing the request in court. The request must be in the approved form and comply with the Rules.⁵¹

Division 4 Service of subpoenas to attend to give evidence

187. The DCPL and Child Safety should work together to ensure that 'subpoenas to attend' are served on a witness with as much notice as possible of the date the witness is required to attend court. After the 'subpoena to attend' has been issued by the court and returned to the DCPL, the DCPL should, as soon as practicable, provide a copy of the 'subpoena to attend' to Child Safety for service.

Division 5 Notice to Child Safety witnesses

188. The DCPL should provide written notice to Child Safety stating which Child Safety staff are required, including when and where the staff are required to give evidence in a proceeding. The DCPL should give Child Safety as much notice as possible of the date a Child Safety staff member is required to attend court to give evidence.

Division 6 Expert witnesses

189. Where the DCPL calls an expert witness to give evidence in a proceeding, such as a psychiatrist or psychologist, the DCPL should take all reasonable steps to minimise the disruption and inconvenience to the witness. In particular, where the witness is giving evidence in person, the DCPL should ensure the witness is present at court no longer than necessary to give the required evidence. The DCPL should also, in appropriate cases, request permission from the court for the witness to give evidence by audio visual link or audio link.
190. The court can make directions about how expert evidence is to be taken in a child protection proceeding.⁵² Directions can be made by the court about various matters including the type and number of experts that will give evidence. Where the DCPL intends to ask the court to make directions under this provision, it should consult with Child Safety about the directions the DCPL intends to seek.

⁵⁰ See rule 94(1)(b) of the Rules.

⁵¹ See rule 93 of the Rules.

⁵² See rule 66(2) of the Rules.

Division 7 Conduct money, witness allowances and witness losses and expenses

191. Conduct money is payable to a witness who is subpoenaed to give evidence to meet their reasonable expenses of travel to and from court. Conduct money is not payable to subpoena recipients who are employees or agencies of the State where they are not a party to or a participant in the proceeding.⁵³ This means that conduct money will not be payable to employees of government departments or agencies who attend court to give evidence such as employees of a department that is responsible for public health, education, housing services or the police.
192. Where conduct money is payable, for example, when the subpoena recipient is a general practitioner, the DCPL is responsible for payment. The DCPL will provide conduct money, in the form of a cheque, at the same time as the 'subpoena to attend' is provided to Child Safety for service. In these circumstances, Child Safety should ensure that, as well as serving the 'subpoena to attend' on the subpoena recipient, that they also provide the cheque in payment of conduct money to the subpoena recipient.
193. In addition to the payment of conduct money to a non-State witness who is not a participant in the proceeding, the court can order the party who subpoenaed the witness to pay a travel and accommodation allowance, and losses and expenses, including legal costs, incurred by the witness incurred in complying with the subpoena.⁵⁴ However, the court can only make such an order if the subpoena recipient gives notice to the party who issued the subpoena that substantial losses and expenses will be incurred in complying with the subpoena, and gives an estimate of those losses or expenses.⁵⁵ Where a subpoena recipient contacts Child Safety and raises a concern about the cost of complying with a 'subpoena to attend', Child Safety should:
- a. draw the subpoena recipient's attention to the notice on the subpoena advising them of their right to seek an order from the court for additional allowances and for substantial losses and expenses incurred in complying with the subpoena under rule 100(3) of the Rules;
 - b. ask the subpoena recipient to provide written notice itemising the estimated losses and expenses they anticipate will be incurred in complying with the subpoena; and
 - c. provide this information to the DCPL, together with a copy of any written communication from the subpoena recipient. This is so the DCPL can consider whether to take action to reduce the anticipated losses and expenses of the witness by, for example, seeking permission from the court for the witness to give evidence remotely.
194. The DCPL is responsible for payment of allowances, or losses and expenses ordered by the court to a witness where the 'subpoena to attend' was issued by the DCPL.

Division 8 Child witnesses

⁵³ See rule 100(2) of the Rules.

⁵⁴ See rule 100(3) of the Rules.

⁵⁵ See rules 100(3) and 100(4) of the Rules.

195. Subject children, or other children, rarely give evidence in child protection proceedings. This is because it is usually not necessary, and not in a child's best interests for them to give evidence. For these reasons, the CP Act and the Rules place restrictions around when a child can give evidence and be cross-examined in child protection proceedings.
196. Only subject children aged 12 years and over can give evidence or be cross-examined, and this can only happen:
 - a. with the leave of the court;
 - b. if the child is represented by a lawyer; and
 - c. if the child agrees.⁵⁶
197. Further, a person can only ask a child, other than a child who is a respondent, to swear or affirm an affidavit with the leave of the court.⁵⁷
198. Despite the tight statutory controls about a child giving evidence in a proceeding, occasionally, a child may give evidence in a case. For example, an older child who is participating in a proceeding, and who has a direct representative, may decide they want to provide an affidavit in response to the application.
199. In the unlikely circumstances that a subject child files an affidavit in response to an application but is unrepresented, the DCPL should be proactive in ensuring the child has a lawyer appointed to represent them in the proceeding.
200. Legal Aid Queensland provides advice and representation services to children in child protection proceedings. The DCPL can help a child to obtain legal representation through Legal Aid Queensland by:
 - a. asking Child Safety to assist the child to apply to Legal Aid Queensland for the appointment of a direct representative; and/or
 - b. requesting the court to appoint a separate representative to represent the child in the proceeding.
201. The DCPL may also pursue the appointment of an advocate from the office of Public Guardian to support the child in the proceeding.
202. The DCPL should consider carefully whether it is necessary to cross-examine a child who has filed an affidavit in response to an application when a matter is proceeding to a contested hearing. The child should only be cross-examined if it is necessary. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety before reaching a decision about whether to seek the court's leave to cross-examine a child under section 112(3) of the CP Act. If the court's leave is granted, the DCPL must provide written notice to the child's legal representative that the child is required for cross-examination as soon as possible prior to the hearing.⁵⁸
203. Where a child has filed an affidavit in response to an application made by the DCPL, the DCPL should ensure that a party or participant seeking to cross-examine the child has obtained the requisite leave of the court under section 112(3) of the CP Act for that cross-examination. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety prior to making submissions to the court about whether leave for cross-examination of a child by another party or participant should be granted.

⁵⁶ See section 112 of the CP Act.

⁵⁷ See rule 81 of the Rules.

⁵⁸ See rule 91(3) of the Rules.

204. Where the court grants leave for cross-examination of the child, the DCPL should ensure the court makes directions about how the child will be cross-examined under rule 102 of the Rules. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety about what directions would be appropriate having regard to all of the circumstances of the case. The DCPL should assist the court to make directions that assist the child to give their best evidence, and to minimise any distress to the child. This could include those things specified by rule 102(2) of the Rules, namely:
- a. excluding a person or persons from the court while the child gives evidence;
 - b. allowing the child to have a support person nearby throughout their evidence; and
 - c. having the child give their evidence by audio visual link or audio link.
205. Where the child's parent is also a child and has filed an affidavit in the proceeding, the DCPL should consider, in consultation with Child Safety, whether to ask the court to make directions under rule 102(2) about how the child's parent will give evidence.

Part 7 Section 106 of the CP Act

206. The court has a duty under section 106 of the CP Act to, as far as practicable, ensure the parties to the proceeding, including the child (if they are participating) and the child's parents, and other parties understand the nature, purpose and legal implications of the proceeding and any order or ruling made by the court. This includes not hearing a proceeding unless a person who requires help to understand or take part in the proceeding, has the help they need to understand or take part.
207. The DCPL, as a model litigant, has a responsibility to be proactive in considering whether a party or participant is likely to require help to understand or take part in the proceeding, and take appropriate steps.
208. Child Safety should assist the DCPL to comply with its model litigant obligations by advising the DCPL if a party or a person participating in the proceeding requires help to understand or take part. This includes circumstances where a parent or participant:
- a. has difficulty communicating in English; or
 - b. has, or may have, a disability including an intellectual or cognitive impairment.
209. Where a party or a participant in a proceeding has a disability that prevents them from understanding the proceeding, the DCPL should assist the court to comply with its obligations under section 106 of the CP Act. The steps the DCPL should take will depend on the particular case, but may include:
- a. asking Child Safety to assist the person to apply to Legal Aid Queensland or a Legal Aid preferred service provider for assistance, or a local community legal centre, or if the person is Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander, assisting them to seek assistance from ATSILS;
 - b. asking the court to issue a direction under rule 68(3) of the Rules directing the registry to send to Legal Aid Queensland the magistrate's written request that Legal Aid Queensland consider giving the person legal assistance for the proceeding; and
 - c. asking the court to make a direction under rule 67(2)(c)(ii) of the Rules, to ensure the person understands and can participate in the proceeding.

Part 8 Interpreters

210. Where a witness appearing as part of the DCPL's case needs an interpreter the DCPL is responsible for arranging this. The DCPL should ensure that every witness called by the DCPL who needs an interpreter has one. Where Child Safety is aware that a witness may need an interpreter they should advise the DCPL. The DCPL is responsible and for payment of any applicable fees.
211. Where a party or a participant in a proceeding requires an interpreter to understand the proceeding and they are unrepresented the DCPL should ask the court to appoint an interpreter to attend all court events to facilitate their taking part. This includes:
- a. the child, where they are participating;
 - b. the child's parents; and
 - c. a person participating under section 113 of the CP Act with all of the rights and duties of a party.
212. Where the court orders the appointment of an interpreter the costs of the interpreter should be met by the court.

Part 9 Preparation for hearing

213. The DCPL should act with diligence to ensure a matter that cannot be resolved by agreement progresses to a hearing as quickly as possible. Where a matter is set down for a hearing, the DCPL should ensure the DCPL is ready to proceed on the allocated hearing date.
214. The DCPL and Child Safety should work together in the lead up to a hearing to ensure that procedural directions of the court are complied with, and that the DCPL is ready to proceed. In particular, ongoing consultation and collaboration can assist to:
- a. ensure the DCPL is kept updated about Child Safety's casework with the child and family as required;
 - b. ensure there is ongoing assessment of the evidence in a matter and how that aligns with the application before the court;
 - c. provide an update about Child Safety's consultation and engagement with the recognised entity where the application is for an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander child;
 - d. provide ongoing disclosure of relevant documents to other parties;
 - e. obtain further information or evidence required for the hearing;
 - f. settle draft affidavits;
 - g. serve filed material on the child's parents and other parties;
 - h. serve subpoenas to produce and subpoenas to attend to give evidence on subpoena recipients;
 - i. share and discuss material returned under subpoena;
 - j. discuss material filed by other parties;
 - k. notify Child Safety about when Child Safety staff will be required to attend court to give evidence; and

- I. serve notice on a party that a person who made an affidavit that they filed in court is required to attend the hearing.
215. Responsibility for preparing a matter for hearing lies with the DCPL, including preparation of:
 - a. a list of filed material to be relied on at the hearing;
 - b. a witness list;
 - c. all witnesses for hearing including Child Safety witnesses;
 - d. the bundle of subpoenaed material to be relied on at the hearing including indexing and paginating;
 - e. a chronology;
 - f. an outline of argument; and
 - g. draft orders of the court.
 216. Where a respondent parent is in custody, the DCPL is responsible for liaising with the court to ensure that timely notice of the hearing is provided to the correctional centre so the parent is brought to court for the hearing.
 217. Child Safety should assist the DCPL to prepare for the hearing by:
 - a. preparing affidavits and other required material in a timely manner;
 - b. serving documents on the child's parents and other parties, and providing affidavits of service;
 - c. providing the DCPL with current telephone contacts for all witnesses, including Child Safety witnesses; and
 - d. advising which Child Safety staff will be attending with authority to provide the Child Safety position about any issues that arise at court.
 218. The DCPL may indicate that a Child Safety witness can be on 'standby' on the day they are due to give evidence. In these circumstances, the Child Safety witness should ensure they remain within or near the relevant CSSC, and are available on the telephone number provided at all times.

Part 10 Appearances by the DCPL

Division 1 Appearing in person

219. The DCPL's preferred mode of appearing in court is in person. In deciding whether to appear at a court event in person, the DCPL should consider:
 - a. the nature of the court event;
 - b. the complexity and sensitivity of the case;
 - c. whether there are any issues that are likely to be contested at the court event;
 - d. whether the other parties, or their lawyers where they are represented, object to the DCPL appearing remotely;
 - e. whether there are particular characteristics of the proceeding, or a party to the proceeding that would make a remote appearance problematic; and
 - f. the distance the DCPL would have to travel to attend the court event.
220. Where an appearance in person is not practicable, the DCPL may seek the court's permission to appear by audio visual link or audio link. For example, where an appearance in person would require a DCPL lawyer to travel a long distance for a single court event. This is consistent with model litigant principles, which require the State to take appropriate steps to manage litigation efficiently. The DCPL may also seek to appear remotely in other circumstances, such as where the legal representative for another party intends to seek an adjournment for the purposes of providing legal advice, and the DCPL does not intend to oppose the adjournment.

Division 2 Appearing by audio visual link or audio link

221. A participant in a child protection proceeding, including the DCPL, can request the court's permission to appear at a future court event by audio visual link or audio link. The request can be made in writing prior to the court event or orally at a preceding court event. The court can also make a direction allowing a participant to appear remotely at a future court event on its own initiative.⁵⁹
222. Where the DCPL decides to make a written request to appear by audio visual link or audio link, the DCPL may ask OCFOS to assist by obtaining information required by the Rules, such as whether the parents object to the request.⁶⁰ The DCPL should request Child Safety's assistance as soon as practicable prior to the appearance. Child Safety should take reasonable steps to obtain this information and provide this information to the DCPL with sufficient time for the DCPL to make the request prior to the court appearance.
223. Where permission is granted and the DCPL intend to appear at a court event by audio visual link or audio link, they should advise OCFOS.

Division 3 Engaging lawyers to appear on behalf of the DCPL

224. Section 11 of the Act provides that the DCPL may engage appropriately qualified lawyers to assist the DCPL to carry out its statutory functions (section 11 lawyer). The principal purpose of this section is to give the DCPL the power to engage a local solicitor or Counsel to appear on behalf of the DCPL at a court event. A section 11 lawyer will act as an agent for the DCPL appearing on the DCPL's instructions.
225. The DCPL should advise Child Safety that they have engaged a section 11 lawyer in the proceeding, and provide Child Safety with the name and contact details for the section 11 lawyer.

Part 11 Mentions

Division 1 Roles of the DCPL and Child Safety

226. As the applicant, the DCPL will attend all mentions of an application. The role of the DCPL at a mention is to lead submissions about the progress of the case and about any issues arising at the mention. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety and other stakeholders as required, particularly if there are resource or casework implications for ⁵⁹ See rule 48(1) of the Rules.

⁶⁰ See rule 48(2) of the Rules.

Child Safety. However, the DCPL is responsible for all decision making about an application at a mention.

227. Child Safety have an important role to play at mentions as the DCPL's briefing partner. There are two aspects to this role—
- a. to ensure the DCPL, and ultimately the court, have up to date information about the child and family's circumstances, which are dynamic and can change rapidly; and
 - b. to participate in consultation with the DCPL and discussion with other parties and participants about issues arising at court, particularly where they relate to Child Safety's casework responsibilities for the child and family.

Division 2 Consultation with Child Safety

228. Prior to each mention of an application, the DCPL and Child Safety should consult about the application and the child and family's current circumstances. Child Safety should ensure the DCPL is fully informed about any new developments in terms of case management or other relevant matters.
229. In preparation for a mention, the DCPL and Child Safety should discuss relevant topics, which might include, but are not limited to:
- a. where the child is subject to one or more interim orders under section 67 of the CP Act, whether there is any change in the Child Safety assessment about the appropriateness of those orders for meeting the child's care and protection needs;
 - b. whether the DCPL should ask the court to make one or more of the orders listed in section 68 of the CP Act, such as ordering that the child be separately represented in the proceeding;
 - c. orders that are likely to have resource or financial implications for Child Safety, such as an order that increases the child's contact with their family or that stipulates that contact occur on a weekend;
 - d. timescales for holding a family group meeting to develop a case plan and file the case plan in court;
 - e. whether the court should make a protection order or vary a domestic violence order under the DFVP Act under rule 70 of the Rules;
 - f. whether the court should make an order under section 114 of the CP Act transferring a proceeding to another court, or an order under section 115 of the CP Act to hear 2 or more applications together.
230. Because of the inherently unpredictable nature of child protection proceedings, particularly where parents are unrepresented, there will be times where issues arise at a mention that were not anticipated. Child Safety should ensure an officer with authority to provide the Child Safety position about matters arising at court attends all court events, including each mention of the application, or is otherwise available by telephone.
231. Where an issue arises at court that the DCPL and Child Safety have not previously consulted about, the DCPL and Child Safety should consult as necessary at court. This may require the DCPL to request that the court stand the matter down for consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety on a relevant issue. Where the issue relates to a case work matter, such as the child's contact with their family, the DCPL must consult with Child Safety prior to providing a position to the court. The DCPL should adopt the Child Safety position about a casework issue unless the evidence does not support the position. Where the DCPL takes a position that conflicts with that of Child Safety, the DCPL should ensure the court is aware of the Child Safety position so it can consider this in reaching a decision.

Division 3 Discussions with other parties or participants

232. As the applicant, the DCPL will lead any discussions or negotiations with other parties, participants or their legal representatives at court. Where the DCPL engages in case discussions and a Child Safety staff member is not present, the DCPL should convey the content of the discussions to Child Safety.

Division 4 Appearances by parents who are in custody

233. Where a respondent parent is in custody, the DCPL is responsible for liaising with the court to ensure that timely notice of the mention is provided to the correctional centre so arrangements are made for the parent to appear remotely.

Part 12 Interim orders and other orders on adjournment

Division 1 Section 99 of the CP Act

234. The CP Act provides the court may adjourn a proceeding for a child protection order for a period decided by the court.⁶¹ In deciding the period of adjournment, the court must take into account the principle that it is in the child's best interests for the application for the order to be decided as soon as possible, and that delay in making a decision for a child should be avoided.⁶² On an adjournment, the court pursuant to section 67 of the CP Act, can make an interim order granting temporary custody of the child to Child Safety⁶³ or a suitable person who is a member of the child's family.⁶⁴
235. On an adjournment of a proceeding, the other relevant provision is s99 of the CP Act, which provides if:
- a. a child is in Child Safety's custody or guardianship, or the custody of a family member under an order; and
 - b. before the order ends, an application is made for the extension of the order or for another order;
 - c. the order granting custody or guardianship continues while there is a pending decision before the court on the new application, unless the court orders an earlier end to the custody or guardianship.
236. The DCPL in consultation with OCFOS, should actively consider if and when an application should be made requesting the court order an end to the continuation of an earlier order under section 99, and seeking an interim order under s67 of the Act, the factors may include:

- a. whether the child is in the custody of Child Safety pursuant to a temporary assessment order, court assessment order or temporary custody order;
- b. whether the child is in Child Safety's custody or the custody of a member of the child's family pursuant to a child protection order;
- c. whether the child is in Child Safety's guardianship pursuant to a child protection order;
- d. that where a child is in the custody or guardianship of Child Safety under a child protection order, which includes an interim order pursuant to section 67 CP Act, the child and their parents acquire a right of review with respect to placement⁶⁵, save in situations where Child Safety reasonably suspects compliance would constitute a risk to the safety of the child or anyone with whom the child was living⁶⁶. In such situations, there is an obligation on Child Safety to provide information to the child and their parents as to this right of review⁶⁷. Where a temporary assessment order, court assessment order or a temporary custody order continues by virtue of section 99 of the CP Act and no interim child protection order is made pursuant to s67 of the CP Act, then there is no right of review, by a child or parent, in respect of placement⁶⁸ and the requirement of Child Safety is simply to notify the parents as the child's placement⁶⁹;
- e. the effect of the court ordering an earlier end to custody or guardianship under s99 of the CP Act, may change the applicable test in respect of interim custody, from a consideration of the court being satisfied:
 - i. that it is necessary to provide interim protection for the child while the investigation is carried out⁷⁰;
 - ii. to there being an unacceptable risk to the child in the adjourned period without the making of the interim order.

Division 2 Interim orders under section 67 of the CP Act

237. When the court adjourns a proceeding, it can make any one or more of a number of interim orders under section 67 of the CP Act.

238. Although section 67(5) of the CP Act provides that an interim order only lasts for the period of the adjournment, an interim order made at the first mention of an application may be continued until the application is finalised, which can be a period of many months. It is critical the DCPL gives careful consideration to an application for an interim order. In particular, the DCPL should:

- a. apply the principles of the Act in decision making about whether to apply for an interim order, including the paramount principle and the principles that emphasise that State intervention in the lives of children and families should be the minimum necessary to meet the child's protection and care needs;

⁶⁵ Section 247 and schedule 3 of the CP Act

⁶⁶ Section 86(3) & (4) of the CP Act

⁶⁷ Section 86(2) of the CP Act

⁶⁸ Section 86(1) of the CP Act

⁶⁹ Section 85 of the CP Act

⁷⁰ For example section (45(1)(c)(i) of the CP Act

- b. consider carefully the sufficiency of evidence to support an application for an interim order; and
 - c. wherever necessary, consult closely with Child Safety about any proposed interim order, and any issues arising in respect of the interim order such as the sufficiency of evidence to support the court making the order.
239. Child Safety should ensure the DCPL is aware of any circumstances where the making of an emergency order was contested or appealed by the child's parents.

Division 3 Other orders under section 68 of the CP Act

240. Under section 68 of the CP Act, the court can also make any one or more of a range of other orders on adjournment, including an order:
- a. requiring a social assessment report to be prepared and filed;
 - b. authorising a medical examination or treatment of the child and a report about the examination or treatment to be filed;
 - c. regulating the child's contact with their family during the adjournment;
 - d. requiring Child Safety to convene a family group meeting to develop or revise a case plan for the child, or for another stated purpose relating to the child's wellbeing and protection and care needs;
 - e. that a court ordered conference be held between the parties; and
 - f. that the child be separately legally represented in the proceeding.
241. The court is required to consider making each of the above orders when it adjourns a proceeding.⁷¹ The DCPL should consult with Child Safety as appropriate in respect of the above orders prior to a mention.
242. Where the court is contemplating ordering the preparation of a written social assessment report about the child and the child's family under section 68(1)(a) of the CP Act on the adjournment of a proceeding, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety about this.⁷² As far as possible, the DCPL should seek Child Safety's view about whether the report is necessary, and about the particular issues the report should address before indicating a position to the court. The DCPL should provide Child Safety's views about the proposed report to the court. The DCPL should not ask the court to order the preparation of a social assessment report without first consulting with Child Safety about the necessity of the proposed report, and about Child Safety's capacity to pay the costs of preparing the report.
243. Where the court orders the preparation of a written social assessment report under section 68(1)(a) of the CP Act, the DCPL should liaise with OCFOs to progress its preparation. Child Safety is responsible for payment of the costs of preparing the report. The DCPL should also, as far as possible, ensure the court clearly prescribes the particular issues the report should address.⁷³
244. here the court proposes to make an order under section 68(1)(c) of the CP Act requiring Child Safety to supervise family contact with the child, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety to ascertain whether Child Safety agrees to supervise the contact. Where

⁷² See rule 66(1) of the Rules.

⁷³ See section 66(2) of the CP Act.

Child Safety does not agree to supervise family contact, Child Safety should provide reasons why not. The DCPL will then be able to provide this information to the court and other parties. Where Child Safety refuses to supervise the family contact, the DCPL should ensure the court is aware of this and the restriction on the court making an order requiring Child Safety to supervise family contact without the agreement of Child Safety under section 68(5) of the CP Act.

245. A further area of consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety is about other orders the court can make under section 68 of the CP Act about the appointment of a separate representative for the child. As indicated above, the Rules require the court to consider the appointment of a separate representative in every case.⁷⁴ The DCPL and Child Safety should consult about this before the first mention of every application and at subsequent mentions as appropriate.

Part 13 Orders under the Domestic and Family Violence Protection Act 2012

246. The court must consider whether to make a protection order or vary a domestic violence order under the Domestic and Family Violence Protection Act 2012 (DFVP Act) in every case.⁷⁵ The court can also make a direction about a proceeding under the DFVP Act, such as directing the registrar to request that information from that proceeding be provided to the Children's Court.⁷⁶ The DCPL and Child Safety should consult about this prior to each court event for every case where domestic and family violence is an issue. In particular, the DCPL should seek Child Safety's view about whether the court should make a protection order or vary a domestic violence order and the reasons for that view.

Part 14 Court ordered conferences

Division 1 Holding a court ordered conference

247. Where an application for a child protection order is contested, there must be a conference between the parties or reasonable attempts to hold a conference must have been made.⁷⁷ The overarching purpose of a conference is to explore the possibility of the parties reaching an agreement about how the application should be resolved. A conference can also narrow the legal issues that are in dispute between the parties for determination at a hearing. The court may direct parties to try to decide or resolve a particular matter in dispute at a conference. In these circumstances, the court must issue a direction stating the particular matter the parties must try to decide or resolve at the conference.⁷⁸
248. In reaching an agreement to resolve the application at a conference, the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child will be the DCPL's paramount consideration. The DCPL will also consider whether there is sufficient evidence to support the agreement reached by the parties.

⁷⁴ See rule 68(1)(b) of the Rules.

⁷⁵ See rule 70 of the Rules.

⁷⁶ See rule 70 of the Rules.

⁷⁷ See section 59(1)(c) of the CP Act.

⁷⁸ See rule 106 of the Rules.

249. The court is responsible for notifying parties and participants of the conference (except the child, unless they have filed a notice of address for service).⁷⁹ In cases where it may not be immediately clear that a participant should be notified of the conference, such as a person taking part in the proceeding under section 113 of the CP Act, the DCPL should pass this information on to the court.
250. Although the child is a party to the application, they are not required to attend the conference. However, where appropriate, having regard to the child's age and ability to understand the matter, the child must be told about the conference and be given an opportunity to participate.
251. Child Safety are required to tell the child about the conference where appropriate as soon as practicable after receiving notice of a conference from the court.⁸⁰ Child Safety should tell the child the date, time and location of the conference, as well as who will be attending and the purpose of the conference. Child Safety should also tell the child they can attend the conference if they want to, but they do not have to. Child Safety should also discuss with the child that, subject to the discretion of the convenor, there is flexibility about how they participate in a conference, for example, they can:
- a. bring a support person;
 - b. attend part, but not all, of the conference;
 - c. talk to the convenor without other participants being present; and or
 - d. provide their views about the application, or a matter relevant to the application, in writing.
252. Where the child indicates an intention to attend the conference, Child Safety should tell the DCPL and pass on any views expressed by the child about how they would like to participate in the conference. In appropriate cases, the DCPL should communicate this information to the convenor for the conference to assist them in their planning and preparation. For example, the child may want to attend the conference, but may not want to speak to the convenor when a particular person is in the room.
253. Where the child attends the conference and they are being given an opportunity to express their views, as far as possible, the DCPL should ensure this is done in accordance with the requirements of section 5E of the CP Act.
254. The DCPL and Child Safety should consult prior to the conference. The purpose of the consultation is for Child Safety to provide the DCPL with up to date information about the child's case and to exchange views about the application and any issues in dispute.
255. Issues to do with the application and about the evidence filed in support of the application discussed at the conference are the responsibility of the DCPL. Issues to do with case management, such as contact and placement, are the responsibility of Child Safety. The relevant agency will normally lead discussion about these matters as they arise at a conference.
256. The DCPL and Child Safety should consult about their respective positions about these matters and discuss what may be negotiable prior to the conference. Where the DCPL is considering a resolution of the application on different terms than those proposed in the application, it should consult with Child Safety about this. The DCPL cannot reach an agreement to resolve an application that includes case management actions that will be carried out by Child Safety, without the agreement of Child Safety. For example, where a parent proposes a resolution to an application that includes the parent having additional contact with the child, the DCPL cannot agree a settlement on these terms unless Child Safety agree to facilitate the additional contact between the child and the parent.

⁷⁹ See rule 108 of the Rules.

⁸⁰ See rule 44 of the Rules.

257. If the conference is for an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, the DCPL should consult with and obtain the views of the recognised entity before agreeing to any resolution of the application at the conference. If the recognised entity is not in attendance at the conference, the DCPL should make contact with the recognised entity by telephone. If the DCPL cannot make contact with the recognised entity, the DCPL should explain to the convenor and participants at the conference that the agreement is subject to consultation with the recognised entity, and ask the convenor to record this in the report of the conference made under section 70 of the CP Act.
258. Occasionally, there may be a benefit in holding a further conference in a proceeding. For example, where significant information is received that is relevant to the application after the earlier conference was held. Where the DCPL believes a further conference may be of benefit, it should consult with Child Safety before asking the court to order that a further conference is held.

Division 2 Dispensing with the requirement to hold a conference in a contested matter

259. In exceptional circumstances, for example, where there is a risk to the safety of a party, section 59(1)(c)(ii) of the CP Act provides that the court can make a child protection order in a contested matter even though a conference has not been held. Before the DCPL submits to the court that it would be inappropriate to hold a conference, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety. If the application to dispense with the requirement for a conference is made by another party or by the court of its own motion, where practicable, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety before making submissions to the court about whether a conference should be held.

Part 15 Family group meetings held whilst the application is before the court

260. The function of the family group meeting is to deal with matters relating to a child's protection and care needs or wellbeing.⁸¹ Where the purpose of the meeting is case planning, this includes considering the child's protection and care needs and agreeing on a plan to meet those needs and promote the child's wellbeing.
261. The DCPL will not ordinarily attend a family group meeting held whilst an application is before the court. However, depending on the circumstances of a particular case, the DCPL may attend a family group meeting on the request of Child Safety.⁸²

⁸¹ See section 51J(1) of the CP Act.

⁸² See section 51(L)(1)(j) of the CP Act.

262. Generally, the purpose of the DCPL attending the family group meeting, will be to provide information about evidentiary matters that relate to the child's protection and care needs, or about matters to do with the application before the court. Circumstances when the DCPL may attend include:
- a. for complex matters; or
 - b. for the provision of legal advice in case planning for a matter that relates to the child's protection and care needs. For example, in a case where the harm to the child was caused by alleged physical abuse of the child by a parent that is the subject of separate criminal proceedings.
263. Following a case planning family group meeting, Child Safety should provide a copy of the documents prepared as part of the case planning process to the DCPL, namely the:
- a. most recent strengths and needs assessment for the child and the child's parents;
 - b. case plan; and
 - c. review report (if it is a revised case plan).
264. Prior to a case plan being endorsed by Child Safety, the DCPL may be asked to provide advice about whether the case plan:
- a. is appropriate for the child's assessed protection and care needs; and
 - b. in the case of a long-term guardianship order, includes satisfactory living and contact arrangements for the child.⁸³

Part 16 Interim and final hearings

265. The DCPL is responsible for running all aspects of the DCPL's case at interim and final hearings. The DCPL should, however, continue to work in partnership with Child Safety in carry out this responsibility.
266. Child Safety staff have three roles at interim and final hearings:
- a. to attend court as a witness to give evidence;
 - b. to support Child Safety staff who are giving evidence (this applies to OCFOS officers); and
 - c. to attend court as the DCPL's briefing partner.

Division 1 Child Safety staff as witnesses

267. Child Safety staff, in particular child safety officers, are key witnesses at interim hearings (where oral evidence is taken) and at final hearings. The Child Safety assessment for a child is at the centre of the DCPL's decision making and should be at the centre of the court's decision making on an application. A number of child safety officers may give evidence at a hearing including:
- a. the child safety officer that completed the initial investigation and assessment for a child and family that led to the referral of the child protection matter to the DCPL;
 - b. the child safety officer that is currently allocated to the child's case; and or
 - c. child safety officers that have previously been allocated to the child's case during a period of time relevant to the application before the court.

⁸³ See section 59(1)(b) of the CP Act.

268. A child safety officer who is scheduled to give evidence at a hearing, should not be present in court during the hearing until after their evidence is completed. For this reason, the DCPL may decide to call the allocated child safety officer as their first witness so they can be present in court for the remainder of the hearing.

Division 2 Child Safety staff attending court

269. Child Safety staff have an important role to play at interim and final hearings. There are two aspects to this role—
- a. to ensure the DCPL, and ultimately the court, have up to date information about the child and family's circumstances, which are dynamic and can change rapidly; and
 - b. to consult with the DCPL and participate in discussion with other parties about Child Safety's casework responsibilities for the child and family.
270. Child Safety should ensure that an officer with authority to provide the Child Safety position about matters arising at court attends all interim and final hearings, or is otherwise available by telephone.
271. Where an OCFOS officer attends an interim hearing (where oral evidence is taken) or a final hearing, they may assist the DCPL with the coordination of witnesses during the hearing.

Division 3 Applications for adjournment of a hearing

272. The DCPL's overarching responsibility as a model litigant conducting court proceedings on behalf of the State, is to ensure that each application is ready to proceed on the allocated hearing date. Requests for an adjournment of a hearing by the DCPL should be rare, and wherever possible, should not be made on the day of the hearing.
273. Where an application for an adjournment of the hearing is made by another party or participant in a proceeding, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety in formulating a position about whether to oppose the adjournment. Consultation with Child Safety allows Child Safety to raise relevant issues including the impact of an adjournment on the child. The DCPL should consider carefully what position to take in response to an application for an adjournment of a hearing, balancing competing factors including:
- a. the requirement to resolve child protection proceedings as quickly and efficiently as possible;⁸⁴
 - b. the requirement to provide procedural fairness to a party to the proceeding; and
 - c. whether a previous adjournment or adjournments have been granted by the court.

Part 17 Transition orders

274. When the court is deciding an application for a child protection order for a child that is already in the custody or guardianship of the chief executive, or a suitable person under a final child protection order, in certain circumstances, the court can make a transition order. A transition order can last for up to 28 days and is made so the child can be gradually transitioned into the care of the parents.⁸⁵ Where the possibility of the court making a transition order arises either prior to or at a court event, the DCPL and Child Safety should consult about the proposed order. The DCPL should ensure the court is aware of Child Safety's position about the transition order.

Part 18 Court outcome communications

275. Following every court event, including a court ordered conference, the DCPL must provide Child Safety with written notice of the court outcome via SharePoint, using the DCPL court outcome notification form. Along with the court outcome notification form, the DCPL should also provide Child Safety with a copy of any sealed orders or directions made by the court.
276. Where possible, the court outcome notification should be uploaded to SharePoint on the same day as the court event. If this is not possible, it should be uploaded to SharePoint by 5:00pm on the next business day. Where the court outcome notification cannot be uploaded to SharePoint during business hours on the same day as the court event, the DCPL must telephone Child Safety and advise them of the court outcome. Before 5:00pm the telephone call should be made to the relevant OCFOS officer. If the relevant OCFOS officer is not available, the DCPL should contact the PO5 OCFOS Legal Officer for the cluster. If it is after 5:00pm, the telephone call should be made to the Child Safety After Hours Service Centre on 1800 177 135 or 3235 9999.

Part 19 Amendment of application to seek a different order after filing

277. Ongoing review of an application and the evidence filed in support, may result in the DCPL deciding that a different child protection order to that sought in the application is considered appropriate and desirable for the child's protection. The safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child must be the DCPL's paramount consideration in decision making about the amendment of the application. The DCPL should also have regard to the sufficiency of evidence to support the order.
278. The Child Safety assessment is also subject to ongoing review. Where Child Safety assess that a different child protection order to that sought in the application is considered appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, they should notify the DCPL.
279. The DCPL may decide to amend an application in a number of circumstances, including:
- a. following consideration of new information provided by Child Safety or evidence filed by the separate representative or another party; and
 - b. as a result of negotiations at a court ordered conference or other court event.
280. Where the DCPL decide that a different child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, the DCPL should amend the filed application to reflect the change of position. The amendment may seek to change aspects of the original application including:

⁸⁵ See sections 65A and 65B of the CP Act.

- a. the type or duration of child protection order sought;
 - b. adding a further child protection order to the application;
 - c. who custody or guardianship of the child is granted to.
281. Before reaching a decision to amend an application, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety. Where the application is for an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, Child Safety should consult with the recognised entity for the child about the proposed amendment to the application. Child Safety should provide the DCPL with the outcome of the consultation for consideration by the DCPL in reaching a decision about whether to amend the application. Where the proposal to amend the application arises at a court event, the DCPL should consult with the recognised entity about the proposed change to the application at court. If the recognised entity is not present at court, the DCPL should attempt to make telephone contact with the recognised entity to discuss the proposed amendment.
282. Where Child Safety are not in agreement with the amendment and further time is necessary for consultation or further assessment, the DCPL should consider whether the application should be adjourned, rather than amended and decided, contrary to the Child Safety position or assessment. Where the DCPL decide to amend the application without the agreement of Child Safety, the DCPL should advise the court of Child Safety's position.

Division 1 written applications for withdrawal

283. Ongoing review of a matter may result in the DCPL deciding that a child protection order is no longer necessary for the child's protection. Where the DCPL is so satisfied, the DCPL should apply to withdraw the application.
284. The Child Safety assessment is also subject to ongoing review whilst they are working with a child and their family. Where Child Safety assess that a child protection order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, they should notify the DCPL.
285. An application for a child protection order may only be withdrawn by the DCPL with the leave of the court.⁸⁶ The DCPL must consult with Child Safety before deciding to apply for the court's leave to withdraw an application for a child protection order. The DCPL may request further information from Child Safety under section 23\(1\) of the Act relevant to the decision to withdraw an application.
286. When the DCPL decide to withdraw an application for a child protection order, they should provide written notification of the decision to Child Safety in the 'Form G – Withdrawal of Application Notification Form' attached to these Guidelines.
287. Where the DCPL decide to withdraw an application without the agreement of Child Safety, the DCPL must also provide Child Safety with written reasons for the decision and Child Safety may request an internal review of the decision using 'Form I – Child

⁸⁶ See section 57A of the CP Act.

Safety Internal Review Request Form'. If Child Safety request an internal review of the decision, the DCPL should delay filing the withdrawal application until after the internal review is completed. The DCPL and Child Safety need to act quickly in requesting and completing any review, so that the process is completed prior to the next court event wherever possible.

288. If the DCPL decide, following consultation with Child Safety, that the application should be withdrawn, they should prepare a written application in a proceeding in the approved form.⁸⁷
289. The application should state the reasons why a child protection order is no longer necessary for the child. There should be sufficient evidence to support the application and to allow the court to be satisfied a child protection order is no longer necessary for the child. This will usually require an affidavit to be filed in support of the application evidencing the reasons why the child protection order is no longer necessary. Where the DCPL decide to withdraw the application without the agreement of Child Safety, the DCPL should advise the court of Child Safety's position.

Division 2 Oral applications for withdrawal

290. An application for leave to withdraw an application can be made orally as well as in writing.⁸⁸ Although the preference is for the application to be made in writing, there may be circumstances when it is appropriate to make the application orally. For example, where all parties are in agreement, and it is in the best interests of the child to resolve the proceedings without delay.
291. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety before making an oral application for leave to withdraw an application. Where Child Safety do not agree with the withdrawal, the DCPL should adjourn the application for further discussion with Child Safety.

Part 1 Participants in a child protection proceeding

292. As well as the parties to the proceeding, the following are participants in a child protection proceeding:
- a. the separate representative for the child;
 - b. a person who is not a party to the proceeding, but who the court allows to take part under section 113 of the CP Act;
 - c. where the child is an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, the recognised entity for the child;
 - d. where a guardian for a party has filed a notice of address for service, the guardian;⁸⁹ and
 - e. if the public guardian has given written notice of an intention to appear in the proceeding under section 108B(2) of the CP act, the public guardian.

⁸⁷ See rule 73 of the Rules.

⁸⁸ See rule 74 of the Rules.

⁸⁹ In these circumstances, under rule 33, documents that are required to be served on the party must be served on the guardian.

Part 2 Participation of children in proceedings

293. The subject child is a party to a child protection proceeding. Although the child is not required to participate in the proceeding, the child has a right to attend and participate in the hearing, and to be represented by a direct representative and/or a separate representative under section 108 of the CP Act. In addition to or instead of being represented by a lawyer, the child may be supported by an advocate from the Office of Public Guardian.
294. Whether a child participates in a proceeding, and how the child participates will depend on the circumstances of each case. In particular, it will depend on the child's age and ability to understand the matter, and the child's views about taking part in the proceeding. The child's participation may be limited to the court receiving the child's views in writing, or it may extend to the child being represented by a direct representative and participating in the proceeding as a party.
295. In cases where the child's age and ability to understand mean they are likely to be able to participate in a proceeding (whether to a limited extent or otherwise), the DCPL, as a model litigant, has an obligation to ensure the child, at an early stage, is given information about participating in the proceeding.
296. Child Safety have an important role to play in assisting the DCPL to comply with this obligation by:
- a. telling the child about the proceeding and what it is about, in a manner appropriate to the child's age and ability to understand;⁹⁰
 - b. making sure the child is aware they do not have to participate in the proceeding, but they can if they want to;
 - c. making sure the child understands there is flexibility about the way they can participate in the proceeding;
 - d. explaining to the child they are entitled to have help to participate in the proceeding, which could include being represented by a lawyer, having an advocate appointed to support them or bringing a support person of their choice to court;
 - e. assisting the child to access help for the proceeding by, for example:
 - i. helping them to make an application for legal aid;
 - ii. making a referral to the Office of the Public Guardian; or
 - iii. helping the child to identify and make contact with a support person of their choice.
297. Child Safety should ensure the DCPL is fully informed about the child's views about participating in the proceeding, and about any steps Child Safety has taken to assist the child to obtain representation or support.
298. The DCPL should assist the court to manage the child's participation in the proceeding in a manner that gives paramount consideration to the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child. The ways in which the DCPL can assist the court include:
- a. ensuring the court has relevant information;

⁹⁰ As required under sections 56(1)(b) and 195 of the CP Act.

- b. asking the court to make a direction under rule 42(1) about how the child will participate when appropriate, for example, a direction allowing the child to have a support person nearby during the proceeding. When the child is an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child, support may be provided to the child by an appropriate person in accordance with Aboriginal tradition or Island custom; and
- c. making submissions to the court about the way the court should hear from the child, which may include the examples provided in rule 43(2) of the Rules.

Part 3 Section 113 participants

299. Under section 113 of the CP Act, the court can allow a person who is not a party to the proceeding to take part, such as a member of the child's family or the child's carer. The extent and duration of the person's participation is determined by the court and can include doing some or all of the things a party can do.
300. The DCPL and Child Safety should consider whether there is a person with a relationship with the child who may wish to participate in the proceeding as a non-party. Where a person who may wish to participate is identified, the DCPL and Child Safety should discuss this.
301. Where the DCPL or Child Safety have contact with a person who may want to participate in a proceeding, such as a member of the child's family or the child's carer, they should tell the person that they can make an application to the court for an order allowing them to take part.
302. The DCPL and Child Safety should also:
- a. encourage the person to seek legal advice about making an application to take part in the proceeding; and
 - b. tell the person about rules 73 and 74 of the Rules, that deal with making an application in a proceeding.
303. Child Safety is responsible for serving the application on the parties.⁹¹
304. Before making a submission to the court about an application under section 113, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety about the:
- a. person's relationship with the child;
 - b. extent to which the person is able to inform the court about a relevant matter;
 - c. extent to which the person should be allowed to participate; and
 - d. parent's, and, where appropriate, the child's views about the person's participation.
305. Section 113 provides broad flexibility for the court to decide how a non-party will take part in the proceeding. In formulating a position about a non-party's participation in the hearing, the DCPL should consider the person's participation carefully, having regard to all the circumstances of the case. The DCPL's paramount consideration must be the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child. The DCPL should also have regard to the extent the person can assist the court in its consideration of the application.

⁹¹ See rule 73 of the Rules.

306. Where appropriate, the DCPL should ask the court to prescribe certain things in the order. For example, where the child has expressed concern about the person receiving particular information in the filed material, the DCPL may submit that that information is redacted from the material provided to the person.

Part 4 Unrepresented parents and section 113 participants

307. Where a parent, or a person who has been allowed to take part in the proceedings under section 113 of the CP Act, is unrepresented, there is an enhanced duty of fairness on the DCPL. The DCPL should take particular care to apply model litigant principles by taking actions including:
- a. encouraging the parent or section 113 participant to seek legal advice including accessing the duty lawyer service where available, and by providing them with information about how they can apply for legal aid;
 - b. explaining the nature of the application and providing information about the court process;
 - c. providing the parent or section 113 participant with a further copy of material previously served on them, where they attend a court event without a relevant document and this is impairing their ability to participate effectively;
 - d. drawing the court's attention to:
 - i. section 106 of the CP Act where relevant, for example, where a parent has a disability, and assisting the court to comply with its obligations under section 106;
 - ii. section 109 of the CP Act and the requirement for the court to be satisfied the parent has had a reasonable opportunity to obtain legal representation before proceeding to hear an application; and
 - iii. rule 80(3) of the Rules that prohibits the court from drawing any inference from a failure by a parent (or other respondent) to file an affidavit in response the application.
308. The DCPL can assist unrepresented parents and section 113 participants in the ways set out above, but DCPL lawyers should not advise on legal issues, evidence or the conduct of their case.
309. Child Safety should also assist unrepresented parents and section 113 participants by:
- a. explaining the content of documents served on them;
 - b. ensuring they are aware of the next court date;
 - c. encouraging them to obtain legal advice and representation, and giving them information about how to access Legal Aid Queensland or a local community legal centre, or if they are Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander, assisting them to seek assistance from the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Service (ATSILS);
 - d. telling them they may bring a support person to court (although whether the person is allowed to be present in the court is at the discretion of the court); and
 - e. telling them they can ask the court for permission to attend a court event by telephone (or by audio visual link), and giving them information about how they can make the request.

Part 5 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and participation by recognised entities

310. Before exercising a power under the Act for an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child the court must consider:
- a. the views of the recognised entity about the child and the child's Aboriginal tradition or Island custom; and
 - b. the general principle that an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child should be cared for within an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander community.⁹²
311. The court must also consider how it is to be informed about these matters, and matters relevant to the additional provisions for placing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children in care mentioned in section 83 of the CP Act, and whether to issue directions to ensure it is appropriately informed.⁹³
312. The DCPL should assist the court by making submissions where appropriate about any directions the court should make to ensure it is informed about the matters.
313. As a participant in the proceeding, the recognised entity can provide their views about the child and Aboriginal tradition or Torres Strait Islander custom to the court either in writing or orally.⁹⁴
314. Before a court event, Child Safety should make contact with the recognised entity to ensure they are aware of the date and time of the court event, and to encourage their attendance.
315. When an application is amended or withdrawn, the DCPL and/or Child Safety should consult with the recognised entity.

Part 6 Communications with legal representatives

316. Communications with legal representatives for parties or participants about an application will normally be between the DCPL and the legal representative. The exception to this is where the communication is about a matter that falls exclusively within Child Safety's casework responsibilities. For example, where a legal representative wants to discuss arrangements for a family group meeting or the child's contact with a parent, the communication should be between the legal representative and the CSSC directly. The point of contact in CSSCs for legal representatives who want to discuss casework matters is the relevant OCFOS officer. Where a legal representative contacts the DCPL to discuss a casework matter, the DCPL lawyer should refer the legal representative to the relevant OCFOS officer. OCFOS officers should inform the DCPL about matters discussed with legal representatives when they are material to the application. For example, where Child Safety make changes to the child's contact arrangements with a parent following discussion with a legal representative, they should advise the DCPL.

⁹² See section 6(4) of the CP Act.

⁹³ See rule 72 of the Rules.

⁹⁴ See rule 47(2) of the Rules.

317. Where a legal representative contacts Child Safety about a matter that relates to an application and is not exclusively about casework, Child Safety should ask the legal representative to contact the DCPL and provide contact details for the relevant DCPL lawyer. Similarly, where Child Safety receive written communication from a legal representative that relates to the application, Child Safety should forward the communication to the DCPL who will respond. Where the DCPL receive written communication about an application from a legal representative, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety before responding if the communication touches on any casework matters, and provide a copy of the communication via SharePoint.
318. The DCPL should keep Child Safety regularly updated about communications with legal representatives for parties or participants, and should consult with Child Safety when appropriate, for example, if an offer to settle the application is made.

Chapter 8 – Applications to vary or revoke a child protection order

Part 1 Referrals by Child Safety

319. When Child Safety is satisfied that a child protection order (other than an interim order under section 67 of the CP Act)⁹⁵ in force for a child is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, Child Safety must refer the child to the DCPL.⁹⁶
320. As well as stating the reasons why the child protection order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, the referral to the DCPL should state:
- a. where the Child Safety recommendation is that the child protection order be varied:
 - i. the reasons why the child continues to be a child in need of protection;
 - ii. the type and duration of child protection order that is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; and
 - iii. the reasons why the recommended child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection;
 - b. where the Child Safety recommendation is that the child protection order be revoked and another child protection order be made in its place:
 - i. the reasons why the child continues to be a child in need of protection;
 - ii. the type and duration of child protection order that should be made in place of the current order; and
 - iii. the reasons why the recommended replacement child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection;
 - c. where the Child Safety recommendation is that the child protection order be revoked:
 - i. the reasons why the child is no longer a child in need of protection;
 - ii. the reasons why the child protection order is no longer appropriate and desirable for the child's protection; and
 - iii. where the current order is a long term guardianship order in favour of a member of the child's family or other suitable person, the reasons why the revocation of the order is consistent with the child's need for emotional security and stability.

⁹⁵ See section 65(8) of the CP Act.

⁹⁶ See section 15(1)(b) of the Act.

321. The DCPL must provide written reasons to Child Safety about decisions relating to applications to vary or revoke a child protection order without the agreement of Child Safety, and the decisions are subject to internal review (see Chapter 11 of these Guidelines).

Part 2 Applications to vary or revoke a child protection order by a parent or child

322. As well as the DCPL, the child or the child's parent can apply to:
- a. vary a child protection order;
 - b. revoke a child protection order and make another child protection order in its place; or
 - c. revoke a child protection order.⁹⁷
323. Where such an application is made, the court is required to provide notice of the application to the DCPL and Child Safety.⁹⁸ Child Safety is responsible for personally serving the application on respondents other than the DCPL, and for telling the child about the application.⁹⁹
324. If it appears the applicant is not represented by a lawyer, Child Safety should provide the applicant with information about how they can apply for legal representation. If the applicant is a child, as well as providing information about applying for legal representation, Child Safety may also assist the child to obtain the support of an advocate from the Office of the Public Guardian.
325. After the DCPL receive notice of the application, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety to:
- a. discuss Child Safety's current assessment about whether the child is a child in need of protection and whether the current child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection;
 - b. obtain Child Safety's feedback about the application and any affidavits filed in support; and
 - c. discuss the preparation of draft affidavits in reply, including agreeing a timetable for providing draft affidavits to the DCPL.
326. As well as providing draft affidavits in reply to the DCPL, Child Safety should also provide a statement:
- a. making a recommendation about the position the DCPL should take in response to the application; and
 - b. summarising the reasons for that recommendation.
327. Where the DCPL do not agree with the Child Safety recommendation, there should be further consultation. Ultimately, the DCPL is responsible for determining how the DCPL will respond to the application.

⁹⁷ See section 65(1) of the CP Act.

⁹⁸ See section 65(5)(b) of the CP Act.

⁹⁹ See section 65(5)(c) and sections 56 and 195 of the CP Act.

328. The DCPL and Child Safety should work collaboratively to finalise any affidavits in reply. The DCPL may request further evidence or information from Child Safety in response to an application, and Child Safety should take reasonable steps to provide the information.
329. There should be ongoing consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety until the application is finalised. Child Safety should keep the DCPL updated about any relevant changes in the child's or the parent's circumstances. Child Safety should ensure an officer with relevant case knowledge and authority attends all court events or is otherwise available by telephone.
330. The DCPL does not have to provide written reasons to Child Safety about decisions the DCPL makes as a respondent to an application Child Safety does not agree with, and decisions are not subject to internal review.

Chapter 9 – Interstate transfers of child protection orders and proceedings

Part 1 Introduction

331. There are five types of interstate transfers of child protection orders and proceedings. They are:
- a. administrative transfer of a child protection order from Queensland to another State;
 - b. judicial transfer of a child protection order from Queensland to another State;
 - c. transfer of a child protection order from another State to Queensland;
 - d. transfer of a child protection proceeding from Queensland to another State; and
 - e. transfer of a child protection proceeding from another State to Queensland.
332. A table showing the responsibilities of the DCPL and Child Safety for each of these transfers is provided at Appendix 2 to these Guidelines.
333. The DCPL is involved in three types of transfers: judicial transfer of a child protection order to another State; the transfer of a child protection proceeding from Queensland to another State; and the transfer of a child protection proceeding from another State to Queensland.
334. Child Safety and its interstate counterparts are signatories to the Interstate Child Protection Protocol (Protocol). The Protocol and supporting operating guidelines contain agreed principles, procedures and timeframes for the conduct of interstate transfers and requests for assistance. The interstate liaison officers in Child Safety are the Child Safety contact for interstate officers. Interstate liaison officers also advise Child Safety staff about issues relevant to the interstate transfer of child protection orders and proceedings. Where information about the requirements of the Protocol and Child Safety's liaison with interstate officers is relevant to the DCPL's functions in this area, Child Safety should provide this information to the DCPL.

Part 2 Applications for judicial transfer of an order to another State

335. Child protection orders (other than an interim order under section 67 or an order granting long-term guardianship of a child to a person other than the chief executive) may be transferred to another State administratively or by the Childrens Court of Queensland.¹⁰⁰ The DCPL is responsible for making applications for judicial transfer of a child protection order.
336. Where Child Safety determine that an application should be made for judicial transfer of a child protection order to another State, they should make a referral to the DCPL.
337. The referral should state:
- a. the reasons why Child Safety are satisfied the order should be transferred;
 - b. the proposed interstate order including any relevant provisions of the proposed order;
 - c. how the proposed interstate order equates to the Queensland child protection order;
 - d. the reasons why the protection sought to be achieved by the proposed interstate order could not be achieved by an order on less intrusive terms; and
 - e. why it is in the child's best interests that the order be transferred.
338. The referral should be accompanied by a draft affidavit evidencing the matters mentioned above. The draft affidavit should also:
- a. address whether a family group meeting has been held or reasonable attempts have been made to hold a family group meeting;
 - b. exhibit the child's current case plan and review report;
 - c. include the child's views and wishes about the proposed transfer;
 - d. state where the child, the child's parents and other persons significant to the child are living;
 - e. where the child is Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander, detail any consultation with the recognised entity about cultural considerations, and how the proposed transfer may impact on the child's identity and future links to their family and community; and
 - f. exhibit the written consent of the interstate officer to the transfer.
339. The DCPL should not make an application for the transfer of an order to another State unless an interstate officer has provided their written consent for the transfer. In deciding whether to bring the transfer application, the DCPL's paramount consideration is the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child.
340. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety in deciding whether to make the transfer application. If the DCPL propose not to make the transfer application, they must consult with Child Safety before reaching this decision. Where the DCPL decide not to make the application without the agreement of Child Safety, written reasons are required and the decision is subject to internal review using 'Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form'.

Part 3 Applications for transfer of a proceeding to another State

341. The DCPL may apply to transfer a current child protection proceeding to another State.

¹⁰⁰ See sections 206 and 212 of the CP Act.

342. Where Child Safety determine that a current proceeding should be transferred to another State, they should notify the DCPL in writing. The written notice should state:
- a. the reasons why Child Safety are satisfied the proceeding should be transferred;
 - b. the reasons why it is in the child's best interests that the proceedings be transferred; and
 - c. whether Child Safety assess that the court should make an interim order granting custody of the child or responsibility for supervision of the child to an interstate officer or another person if a transfer order is made.¹⁰¹
343. The written notice should be accompanied by a draft affidavit evidencing the matters mentioned above. The draft affidavit should exhibit the written consent of the interstate officer to the transfer and should also include information about:
- a. whether there are any child protection orders in force for the child in the other State;
 - b. whether there are any current, or have previously been any, child protection proceedings for the child in the other State;
 - c. where the child, the child's parents and other persons significant to the child are living;
 - d. include the child's views and wishes about the proposed transfer; and
 - e. where the child is Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander, any consultation with the recognised entity about cultural considerations, and how the proposed transfer may impact on the child's identity and future links to their family and community.
344. Where the DCPL determine that it may be in the child's best interests for a current child protection proceeding to be transferred to another State, they should consult with Child Safety about this. In particular, Child Safety liaise with the relevant interstate office about the proposed transfer, and should report back to the DCPL about this. The DCPL should not make an application for the transfer of a proceeding to another State unless an interstate officer has provided their written consent for the transfer.
345. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety in deciding whether to make the transfer application. If the DCPL propose not to make the transfer application, they must consult with Child Safety before reaching this decision. Where the DCPL decide not to make the application without the agreement of Child Safety, written reasons are required and the decision is subject to internal review by Child Safety using 'Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form'.

Part 4 Applications for transfer of a proceeding to Queensland

346. Where another State seeks to transfer a child protection proceeding to Queensland under a law of that State, they must first obtain the consent for the transfer from Child Safety. Child Safety must consent to the transfer, unless satisfied it is not in the child's best interests for the proceedings to be transferred.¹⁰² Child Safety should consult with the DCPL before consenting to the transfer.
347. When Child Safety consents to a transfer of a proceeding to Queensland, Child Safety should provide the DCPL with a copy of:
- a. the written consent to the transfer;
 - b. the decision from the interstate court to transfer the proceeding;

¹⁰¹ See section 230 of the CP Act.

¹⁰² See section 234 of the CP Act.

- c. any interim order issued by the interstate court; and
 - d. Child Safety's written notice filed in the court stating that the DCPL is a party to the proceeding in place of the interstate officer.
348. Upon registration of the interstate transfer decision in the court, the DCPL becomes a party to the proceeding in place of the interstate officer.
349. The DCPL and Child Safety (along with other parties including the child and the child's parents) may apply to the court to revoke the registration of the interstate transfer decision. The DCPL and Child Safety should not take this step without first consulting with each other.

Chapter 10 – Appeals

Part 1 Responsibility for appeals

350. The DCPL is responsible for bringing and responding to appeals against the following decisions of the court:
- a. determining an application for a child protection order;
 - b. on an application for a child protection order, including interim orders made on the adjournment of a proceeding; and
 - c. on an application to transfer a child protection order or child protection proceeding from Queensland to another State.
351. Child Safety is responsible for bringing and responding to appeals against a decision of the court on an application for an emergency order. Child Safety may instruct the DCPL to appear on its behalf in these appeals. Further guidance about the DCPL appearing on the instructions of Child Safety in appeals against emergency orders, and other child-related matters is contained in Chapter 12 of these Guidelines.
352. An appeal can be commenced by the DCPL in response to a request from Child Safety or on the DCPL's own initiative. Where Child Safety request that the DCPL bring an appeal, the DCPL will make an independent decision about whether to commence proceedings. Child Safety cannot direct the DCPL to bring an appeal, however, the DCPL should have regard to the reasons why Child Safety say the appeal should be brought.

Part 2 Timeliness

353. Timely decision making about whether to bring an appeal is critical. Both the DCPL and Child Safety should act quickly. Consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety about whether to bring a DCPL appeal should occur in a timely way.

Part 3 Urgent and non-urgent appeals

354. Urgent action in appeal decision making is particularly important for appeals against interim and final decisions on a child protection order application that are determined to place the child at immediate and unacceptable risk of suffering significant harm (urgent appeals). Urgent appeals should be brought with utmost speed (ideally on the day of the decision or the next business day) and should normally be accompanied by an application to stay the operation of the decision.

355. Examples of an urgent appeal include appeals against a decision:
- a. not to make an interim order granting temporary custody of a child to Child Safety in circumstances where the child has been in the temporary custody of Child Safety and this is determined to be necessary in order to meet the protection and care needs of the child; and
 - b. to make a protective supervision order for a child who is in the custody of Child Safety at the time of the decision, which is assessed to place the child at unacceptable risk of suffering significant harm.
356. Non-urgent appeals relate to decisions of the court that do not give rise to an immediate and unacceptable risk of significant harm to the child (non-urgent appeals). For example:
- a. a decision to make an order granting custody of the child to Child Safety on an application for a long-term guardianship order in favour of the chief executive;
 - b. a decision to make an order granting custody of the child to Child Safety for one year on an application for a two year custodial order in favour of Child Safety; and
 - c. a decision involving an erroneous statement or application of the law that does not result in an outcome that places the child at immediate and unacceptable risk of significant harm.

Part 4 Child Safety requests the DCPL bring an appeal

357. Where Child Safety assess that an appeal should be brought, Child Safety should make a written appeal request using 'Form H – Child Safety Appeal Request Form' via SharePoint (unless the request relates to an urgent appeal, which can be requested by telephone). If the appeal request cannot be made via SharePoint, it can be hand delivered, faxed or posted to the DCPL. The DCPL should provide a written acknowledgement of receipt of the appeal request via SharePoint within 24 hours of receiving the request.
358. The appeal request should state the reasons why Child Safety believe an appeal should be brought including:
- a. the impact of the court's decision on the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child; and
 - b. the proposed grounds of appeal including a statement of how the court erred.
359. This information should be set out in summary form in the 'Form H – Child Safety Appeal Request Form' attached to these Guidelines.
360. Written requests for appeals other than urgent DCPL appeals, should be made as soon as practicable and within five working days of the date of the court's decision. This is to allow time for an internal review of the DCPL's decision before the appeal period ends, if the DCPL decide not to bring an appeal without the agreement of Child Safety.

Part 5 Consultation and collaboration with Child Safety

361. The DCPL should consult with Child Safety in deciding whether to commence an appeal. In particular, the DCPL must consult with Child Safety before deciding not to bring an appeal requested by Child Safety. The DCPL should also consult with Child Safety before deciding to commence an appeal on the DCPL's own initiative.
362. There should be ongoing consultation between the DCPL and Child Safety until the appeal is resolved. The DCPL and Child Safety should consult prior to appeal court events to ensure the DCPL has up to date information about the child's circumstances and to discuss relevant casework matters. Child Safety should ensure an officer with relevant case knowledge and authority attends all appeal court events or is otherwise available by telephone.
363. The DCPL and Child Safety should also work together on the preparation of any further evidence to be filed in the appeal. Where an appeal is accompanied by an application for a stay of the operation of a decision, the DCPL may file a further affidavit evidencing the steps Child Safety has taken to mitigate the risk of harm to the child arising from the decision appealed against, such as safety planning, home visits and police welfare checks. The DCPL and Child Safety should work together quickly and efficiently to ensure further evidence is filed in a timely way.

Part 6 Deciding whether to bring an appeal

364. In deciding whether to bring an appeal, the DCPL's paramount consideration must be the safety, wellbeing and best interests of the child.
365. The DCPL should also consider whether:
- there are grounds for the appeal and a reasonable prospect of success; and
 - the appeal raises issues of general importance to the application of the Act, the CP Act or other relevant legislation.
366. Decisions about whether to bring an urgent appeal, whether on request by Child Safety or on the DCPL's own initiative, should be made urgently and by the end of the next business day following the court's decision.

Part 7 Notification of decision

367. If the decision relates to an urgent appeal, immediate notification of the DCPL's decision about whether to bring an appeal, should be provided to Child Safety by telephone and followed up with written notification of the decision via SharePoint in the 'Form B Director's Decision Notification form' attached to these Guidelines.
368. Decisions about whether to bring a non-urgent appeal, should be made as soon as practicable. Where Child Safety makes a non-urgent appeal request, it should be decided and written notification of the decision provided within five business days of receipt of the appeal request in the 'Form B – Director's Decision Notification form' attached to these Guidelines.

Part 8 Written reasons for decision and internal review

369. Where the DCPL decide not to commence an appeal requested by Child Safety, the DCPL must provide written reasons for the decision (unless Child Safety, following consultation, agree that an appeal should not be brought).
370. The written reasons must be prepared by the DCPL lawyer that made the decision. The written reasons should:
- a. be in the 'Form C – Director's Written Reasons for Decision form' attached to these Guidelines;
 - b. use clear and unambiguous language;
 - c. state the reasons why the DCPL decided not to bring an appeal;
 - d. explain the basis for the decision;
 - e. be provided to Child Safety:
 - i. for urgent DCPL appeal requests, by the end of the next business day following receipt of the request, and at the same time as notification of the decision is provided; and
 - ii. for non-urgent DCPL appeal requests, within five business days of receipt of the request and at the same time as notification of the decision is provided.
371. Child Safety may request an internal review of a decision not to bring an appeal requested by Child Safety using 'Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form'. Internal reviews should be made and dealt with in accordance with the procedure set out in Chapter 11, Part 4 of these Guidelines.

Part 9 Responding to appeals

372. Where the DCPL is a respondent in an appeal brought by another party, the DCPL should consult with Child Safety in responding to the appeal. In particular, the DCPL should consult with OCFOs in the preparation of the DCPL's outline of argument and any further affidavits to be filed in the appeal. The DCPL should also consult with Child Safety in preparation for appeal court events.
373. The DCPL do not have to provide written reasons to Child Safety about decisions the DCPL makes as a respondent in an appeal that Child Safety does not agree with, and decisions are not subject to internal review.

Chapter 11 – Miscellaneous

Part 1 Ongoing matter review

374. A decision by the DCPL to apply for a child protection order is subject to ongoing review until the application is finalised. This is particularly important because of the dynamic nature of the lives of children and families. Ongoing review will involve regular consultation with Child Safety and ongoing assessment of the evidence about whether:
- a. the child is a child in need of protection; and

- b. the order sought is appropriate and desirable; or
 - c. where the child is subject to a child protection order, whether revocation of the order is still appropriate and desirable for the child's protection.
375. Ongoing case review may also involve the DCPL requesting further information or evidence from Child Safety under section 23 of the Act to ensure the sufficiency and currency of the evidence before the court.
376. The Child Safety assessment is also subject to ongoing review whilst they are working with a child and their family. Where Child Safety assess that different intervention to that sought in the application is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection, they should notify the DCPL. For example, whilst an application is before the court, Child Safety may assess that a more or less intrusive order, or that no order should be made for the child. In these circumstances, the DCPL and Child Safety should consult, so the DCPL can decide whether the application before the court should be amended or withdrawn.
377. Child Safety may also assess that, due to a change of circumstances, the interim protective measures in place to protect a child are no longer appropriate to meet the child's protective needs. For example, Child Safety may assess that a child that is the subject of an application for a protective supervision order has suffered harm or is at unacceptable risk of suffering harm if the child is not taken into custody. In these circumstances, Child Safety and the DCPL should engage in urgent consultation so the DCPL can consider whether there is sufficient evidence to support an application for temporary custody, and can make arrangements to have the application brought on urgently for mention. In some cases it may be necessary for Child Safety to take a child into custody under section 18 of the CP Act. However, generally the DCPL and Child Safety should engage in urgent consultation with a view to ensuring the child's protective needs are met by seeking the appropriate interim orders on adjournment of the application for a child protection order.

Part 2 Transcripts of proceedings

378. The DCPL is responsible for deciding whether to obtain a transcript of proceedings for applications for child protection orders and appeals. Where the DCPL decide to obtain a transcript of proceedings, the DCPL is responsible for payment of any applicable fees.

Part 3 Section 99MA of the CP Act – notification of suspension to the DCPL

379. Section 99MA of the CP Act provides for the mandatory suspension of a QCAT review proceeding about a Child Safety contact decision, when the person who commenced the review proceeding is also a party to a child protection proceeding before the court. The purpose of the provision is to allow decisions about a child's contact with a parent or family member to be made in one jurisdiction.
380. Where a review proceeding is suspended by QCAT, the tribunal registrar must notify the parties to the review and court of the suspension. Child Safety is then required to notify the parties to the child protection proceeding of the suspension. Child Safety should provide notice of the suspension to the DCPL and other parties as soon as practicable and prior to the next court event. The notification to the DCPL, along with a copy of the notifications sent by Child Safety to the parties should be provided to the DCPL via SharePoint.

Part 4 Internal review of the DCPL's decision

Division 1 Reviews generally

381. Where the DCPL is required to provide written reasons for a decision to Child Safety under section 18 of the Act, Child Safety may request that the DCPL conduct an internal review of the decision. Written reasons are required when the DCPL:
- a. make a decision on a child protection matter that Child Safety disagree with (section 18(1)(a) or (b) of the Act);
 - b. decide to withdraw an application for a child protection order without the agreement of Child Safety (section 18(1)(c) and Chapter 8 of the Guidelines);
 - c. decide not to bring an appeal requested by Child Safety, where Child Safety still want the appeal to be brought following consultation (section 18(1)(c) and Chapter 10 of the Guidelines);
 - d. decide not to make an application to transfer a child protection order to another State without the agreement of Child Safety. (section 18(1)(c) and Chapter 9 of the Guidelines); and
 - e. decide not to make an application to transfer a child protection proceeding to another State without the agreement of Child Safety. (section 18(1)(c) and Chapter 9 of the Guidelines).
382. Internal reviews must be conducted on the same information the DCPL considered in reaching the decision. Where Child Safety have new information and they want the DCPL to reconsider the child's case, Child Safety should make a new referral of a child protection matter to the DCPL including the new information.
383. Internal reviews should be dealt with by the DCPL as quickly as possible and prior to the expiry of any current order or appeal period, unless the review request is received after the order or the appeal period has ended.
384. The request should:
- a. be made in writing via SharePoint using 'Form I – Child Safety Internal Review Request Form' attached to these Guidelines;
 - b. be made as soon as practicable and within 10 business days of the date the DCPL notified Child Safety of the decision. If the review relates to a child that is subject to a current order, the request should be made as soon as practicable prior to the expiry of the order. If the review relates to a non-urgent DCPL appeal, the request should be made as soon as practicable and within 5 business days of the date the DCPL notified Child Safety of the decision not to appeal;
 - c. state briefly the reasons why Child Safety disagree with the DCPL's decision and indicate any matters Child Safety want the DCPL to take into account in the review; and
 - d. not include new information.

385. The DCPL should provide a written acknowledgement of receipt of the review request via SharePoint within 24 hours of receiving the request.
386. The review must be conducted by a different decision maker of the same or a higher level to the original decision maker.
387. The review should be completed within 5 working days of receipt of the request or earlier if the order or appeal period ends during this time. The review should either confirm the original decision or make a different decision to the original decision.
388. The decision on the review should:
- a. be recorded in the 'Form J – Director's Review Decision Notification Form' attached to these Guidelines;
 - b. state the reasons for the decision;
 - c. list any actions arising from the decision; and
 - d. be provided to Child Safety as soon as possible and within one business day of the completion of the review.
389. Where the decision on the review is to make a different decision to the original decision, the DCPL should communicate this to Child Safety immediately by telephone with the completed 'Form J – Director's Review Decision Notification Form' to be provided as soon as practicable after that. The DCPL should take any steps required to action the new decision on an urgent basis. For example, if the original decision was to refer the matter back to Child Safety and, on review, the DCPL decide to apply for a child protection order, the application (and supporting material) should be finalised and filed as a matter of urgency.

Division 2 Reviews where the child is subject to an emergency order

390. Where Child Safety make a review request for a child that is subject to an emergency order, the DCPL and Child Safety should work together efficiently to ensure that, wherever possible, the review can be completed and any resulting action taken before the emergency order ends.
391. In order to achieve this, a review request for a child subject to an emergency order:
- a. should be made urgently following receipt of the written reasons for decision;
 - b. can be made orally by telephoning the DCPL; and
 - c. should be decided urgently and, wherever possible, before the emergency order ends.
392. Similarly, the DCPL should communicate the outcome of a review request to Child Safety immediately by telephone with the completed written internal review outcome to be provided as soon as practicable after that.

Division 3 Reviews of the DCPL decision not to bring an appeal

393. Generally, requests for internal review of a decision not to bring a DCPL appeal requested by Child Safety should be made quickly and as soon as practicable after receipt of the DCPL's written reasons for decision.

394. Where the review relates to an urgent DCPL appeal, it should be dealt with urgently without delay and by the end of the next business day following receipt of the request. Internal reviews relating to non-urgent appeals should be dealt with expeditiously and before the appeal period ends.

Part 5 Information sharing between the DCPL and Child Safety

395. In performing its statutory functions, the DCPL may receive information about a child the subject of an application or their family that is relevant to Child Safety's ongoing intervention with the child. For example, a member of the child's family may provide information to the DCPL at a court event about a parent's drug use that suggests the child may be suffering harm or is at risk of suffering significant harm. As well as advising the family member to pass this information on to Child Safety directly in light of Child Safety's frontline child protection responsibilities, the DCPL should also provide this information to Child Safety. The information should be provided as soon as practicable after receipt of the information. In the first instance, the DCPL may provide the information orally or in writing via SharePoint. Where the DCPL provide the information orally, this should be followed by subsequent written confirmation of the information provided.
396. Where the information received by the DCPL suggests a child may have been the victim of an offence, or that an offence has occurred that gives rise to a risk of significant harm to the child, the DCPL should provide the information to police. The information should be provided to police in writing as soon as practicable after receipt or on an urgent basis depending on the nature of the information received. Before the DCPL provide information to the police, the DCPL should provide the information to Child Safety and advise Child Safety the information is also being provided to police.

Part 6 Child Protection (International Measures) Act 2003

397. The Child Protection (International Measures) Act 2003 (Qld) (CP(IM) Act) provides for Queensland's involvement in implementing the child protection aspects of the Convention on Jurisdiction, Applicable Law, Recognition, Enforcement and Co-operation in respect of Parental Responsibility and Measures for the Protection of Children (Child Protection Convention). The Child Protection Convention is an international agreement about parental responsibility and measures to protect children, which aims to ensure there is international cooperation and jurisdictional clarity for the protection of children across international borders. The child protection aspects of the Child Protection Convention are the responsibility of the States and Territories.
398. The Director-General of Child Safety is designated as the central authority for implementing the child protection aspects of the Child Protection Convention.¹⁰³ Circumstances when Child Safety's obligations under the CP(IM) Act are engaged include where:
- a. urgent protective measures are required for a child who is present in Queensland although habitually resident in a Convention country other than Australia; or ¹⁰³ See section 29(1) of the CP(IM) Act.

- b. a Convention Country requests that Queensland seek protective measures for a child whose habitual residence is the requesting Convention Country but the child is present in Queensland for the time being.
399. As the designated central authority for implementing the child protection aspects of the Child Protection Convention, Child Safety is responsible for all communication with Convention Countries about the Child Protection Convention. If an officer from a Convention Country contacts the DCPL about a child, the DCPL should:
- a. explain that the Director-General of Child Safety is designated as the central authority for implementing the child protection aspects of the Child Protection Convention; and
 - b. ask the Convention Country to contact the Legal Services Branch of Child Safety and provide the relevant contact details.
400. Child Safety's obligations under the CP(IM) Act include conducting investigations and assessments of children and families, providing support on a voluntary basis and pursuing compulsory intervention in the court through an application for an emergency order and/or by making a referral to the DCPL recommending that an application for a child protection order be made.
401. When Child Safety assess that a child to whom the CP(IM) Act applies is:
- a. a child in need of protection; and
 - b. that a child protection order is appropriate and desirable for the child's protection;
402. Child Safety should refer the child to the DCPL. The referral should comply with Chapter 2 of these Guidelines.
403. The DCPL should make a decision about how to deal with the referral in accordance with section 17 of the Act and Chapter 3 of these Guidelines. The DCPL is not obliged to file an application for a child protection order for a child that is referred to it, to which the CP(IM) Act applies. The DCPL should assess the referral including considering the sufficiency of evidence to make an application in the normal way.

Part 7 Media and publications

404. DCPL lawyers are not permitted to make public comment in their professional capacity about any aspect of their work without the permission of the Director. Section 19 of the Act imposes a duty of confidentiality on persons who gain information about a person's affairs through the administration of the Act. This information may only be recorded and disclosed to someone else in accordance with the provisions of section 19(3) of the Act. Sections 187 and 188 of the CP Act also impose a duty of confidentiality on persons who gain information about a person's affairs through the administration of the CP Act. This information may only be used or disclosed in accordance with the provisions of sections 187(4) and (5) and section 188(3) of the CP Act.

Chapter 12 – Providing advice and representation to Child Safety

405. The Act allows the DCPL to provide legal advice and representation upon request to Child Safety.¹⁰⁴
406. The DCPL may provide legal advice to Child Safety when requested about:
- a. the functions of the chief executive of Child Safety under the Adoptions Act 2009 and the CP Act;
 - b. other matters relating to the safety wellbeing and best interests of a child; and
 - c. matters involving the State's obligations under the Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction (Hague Child Abduction Convention) as applied under section 111B of the Family Law Act 1975 (Cwlth).
407. The DCPL may also represent the State in legal proceedings when requested:
- a. under the Adoptions Act 2009 and the CP Act;
 - b. relating to the safety wellbeing and best interests of a child; and
 - c. under the Family Law (Child Abduction Convention) Regulations 1986 pertaining to the State's obligations under the Hague Child Abduction Convention.
408. In each of these circumstances, the DCPL acts on the instructions of Child Safety and on a fee for service basis. Child Safety should provide formal instructions to the DCPL by hand delivering, posting or faxing a letter of instructions together with any other relevant information to the DCPL.

Disclosure process

Why have I been given this form?

You have been given this form because section 189C of the Child Protection Act 1999 provides that the Director of Child Protection Litigation (the Director) has an ongoing duty to disclose to each other party all documents in the Director's possession or control that are relevant to the proceeding. This form is how the Director tells you about the documents which it has an obligation to disclose to you.

Although the Director has an obligation to disclose relevant documents to you, you can also ask the Director for any particular relevant documents that you want disclosed to you.

Under rule 52 of the Childrens Court Rules, the Director must file and serve this disclosure form on you within 20 days of filing an application for a child protection order. The Director may also give this form to you again at any other time it thinks it is appropriate to or because the Childrens Court has ordered it to.

How do I access documents?

*If you tell the Director you want access to particular documents you should read the following information. There are two lists of documents. The first list (in Box A) explains the types of documents the Director normally has access to because they are documents that are normally held by the Department of Communities, Child Safety and Disability Services (Child Safety). This list is to help you decide if there are any particular documents you want to be disclosed. The second list (Box B) is a list of additional, specific documents the Director has decided are relevant and you might want to be disclosed to you. *(Delete sentence if Box B does not list specific documents.)

If you want to access a particular document you can request it by filling out the request for disclosure form which has been given to you with this form. You should try and be as specific as you can when describing the documents that you want so that the Director can locate the document for you and organise the best way for you to have access to it. Information that can help the Director locate documents for you include:

- Who the document is about
- What the document is about
- The date of the document or the time period to which the period relates

How will the Director let me access documents?

You can indicate to the Director how you would prefer to access the documents when you fill in the request for disclosure form. For example, you may ask that the Director post the documents to you or send them to you by email (if an electronic copy of the document is available).

The Director will consider your request but it is ultimately up to the Director as to how you will be given access to the documents. For example, if you request a large number of documents be sent to you, the Director may ask that you come to an office to inspect the documents instead and take copies of the documents that you need.

Can the Director refuse to give me access to any documents that I ask for?

The Director may refuse to give you access to certain documents or information in the circumstances outlined in section 191(2) of the Child Protection Act. If you ask the Director for access to a document and the Director refuses to give you access to the document, the Director will explain to you why the Director is refusing to give you access.

If the Director tells you that the Director refuses to give you access to a document under section 191(2), the Director is not required to disclose the document unless the Childrens Court orders disclosure. If the Childrens Court orders disclosure, the disclosure is on the terms ordered by the Childrens Court.

What do I do if I don't agree with the Director's refusal to give me access to a document?

If you do not agree with the Director's refusal to give you access to a document you should seek independent legal advice from a lawyer. The lawyer may be able to help explain why you have been refused disclosure of a document.

You may apply to the Childrens Court under s 189(5)(c) to ask the Childrens Court to order the Director to disclose the document to you. A lawyer might be able to help you apply to the Childrens Court to seek an order for the Director to disclosure the document to you.

The Director also listed the documents and types of documents that are normally held by the Director and/or Child Safety (Box A). The Director may have also included additional specific documents that the Director thinks you might want to access (which may have been Box B).*

You can request access to any documents in the possession or control of the Director that are relevant to the proceeding.

The Director explained that the Director may refuse to disclose documents to you under section 191(2) of the Child Protection Act 1999. The Director will have given you a list of documents that the Director is refusing to disclose to you because of section 191(2) (which may have been Box B or C). The Director might refuse documents that you have requested because the Director, when reviewing them, has realised that there is a reason to refuse to disclose them to you because of section 191(2). If this happens, the Director will explain to you why the Director has refused to disclose the documents.

If you would like access to any documents then you should write those documents in the box below. Remember, try to give as much information as you can about each document so that the Director can find it for you and can work out how best to give you access to it.

I would like access to the following documents:

- include as many details about each document as you can. Documents may need to be described as per the requirements in section 190 of the Child Protection Act 1999). Information that might help the Director includes –
 - who the document is about
 - what the document is about
 - the date of the document or what period of time the document relates to

How would you like to access the documents?

The Director of Child Protection Litigation will try and give you the documents in the way that you specify below. However, sometimes the Director can't give you the documents in the way that you would like. If the Director can't give you the documents in the way that you have requested the Director will explain why.

If you are unhappy with the way that the Director has decided that you should have access to the documents, you should seek advice from a lawyer about what to do.
